

Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED

05-671 NOV 22 2005

OFFICE OF THE CLERK

In the
Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Petitioner,

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA,
Respondent.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

GREG ABBOTT
Attorney General of Texas

BARRY R. MCBEE
First Assistant Attorney
General

EDWARD D. BURBACH
Deputy Attorney General
for Litigation

R. TED CRUZ
Solicitor General
Counsel of Record

RANCE L. CRAFT
Assistant Solicitor General

AMY WARR
Assistant Solicitor General

P.O. Box 12548
Austin, Texas 78711
(512) 936-1700

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

In Atascadero State Hospital v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234 (1985), the Court held that Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act neither effected a valid abrogation of state sovereign immunity nor laid the predicate for a valid waiver of immunity by the States, because the statutory language was insufficiently clear and unambiguous. In response, Congress enacted the Civil Rights Remedies Equalization Act of 1986, 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a), which purports to expressly abrogate state sovereign immunity. Since 1986, however, this Court's precedents have raised substantial doubts as to the constitutionality of that attempted abrogation. See Bd. of Trs. of the Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356 (2001); Seminole Tribe of Fla. v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44 (1996).

In the instant case, the court of appeals held that the plain language of Section 2000d-7(a)—which expressly attempts to abrogate state immunity—simultaneously served as conditional waiver language. Although characterizing the abrogation language as “janus-faced,” the court nonetheless deemed the statutory text also to be clear and unambiguous waiver language.

1. Should the Court resolve the circuit split over whether a State’s acceptance of federal funds constitutes a knowing waiver of sovereign immunity pursuant to the language of Section 2000d-7(a)?
2. Assuming that Section 2000d-7(a) creates a valid conditional waiver, does that provision’s requirement that immunity be waived if an agency receives any federal funds whatsoever, regardless of the nature or purpose of those funds, violate the “relatedness” prong of South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203, 207 (1987), that Congress’s authority to impose conditions under the Spending Clause must be limited to those conditions that relate to “the federal interest in particular national projects or programs”?

PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDING

Petitioner is the Texas Department of Public Safety, a government agency of the State of Texas. Respondent is Julie Dunlop Espinoza. Intervenor is the United States of America.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Questions Presented	i
Parties to the Proceeding	ii
Opinions Below	2
Jurisdiction	2
Constitutional and Statutory Provisions Involved	2
Statement	4
Reasons for Granting the Petition	11
I. The Court Should Grant Certiorari to Resolve Whether 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a) Unambiguously Conditions the Receipt of Federal Funds upon the Waiver of Sovereign Immunity and to Resolve the Circuit Split Over Whether States Knowingly Waive Their Eleventh Amendment Immunity Pursuant to That Section By Accepting Federal Funds.	12
A. Unambiguous Statutory Language Is an Essential Prerequisite to a Valid Spending Clause Condition.	13
B. Section 2000d-7(a) Does Not Clearly and Unambiguously Condition the Receipt of Federal Funds on the Waiver of Sovereign Immunity.	14
1. The reference to "federal funds" in Section 2000d-7(a) does not transform the abrogation language into clear and unambiguous conditional waiver language.	15

2. Dicta from Lane v. Pena does not support the court of appeals's reading of Section 2000d-7(a) as clear and unambiguous waiver language. . . .	16
C. The Fifth Circuit's Decision Conflicts With This Court's Precedent and with a Decision of the Second Circuit.	19
1. The Fifth Circuit's decision widens the circuit split regarding Section 2000d-7(a).	19
2. The Fifth Circuit's contradicts this Court's precedents by inferring conditional waiver from a statute that is, at a minimum, ambiguous. . . .	20
II. The Court of Appeals's Decision Disregards Dole 's Relatedness Limitation on Congress's Spending Clause Authority and Thereby Threatens the Constitutional Balance of Power Between the Federal Government and the States.	24
A. The Relatedness Limitation on Congress's Spending Power Is a Critical Component of Our Federalism.	25
B. The Court of Appeals's Decision Disregards Dole 's Relatedness Requirement.	27
C. The Courts of Appeals' Recurring Disregard of Dole 's Relatedness Requirement Warrants the Court's Review.	29
Conclusion	30

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

A.W. v. Jersey City Pub. Schs. , 341 F.3d 234 (CA3 2003) . . .	19
Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon , 473 U.S. 234 (1985)	i, 1, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 21- 23
Barbour v. Wash. Metro. Area Transit Auth. , 374 F.3d 1161 (CADC 2004)	25, 28, 29
Bd. of Trs. of the Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett , 531 U.S. 356 (2001)	i, 6, 13, 14, 24
Bruggeman v. Blagojevich , 324 F.3d 906 (CA7 2003)	19
Cherry v. Univ. of Wis. Sys. Bd. of Regents , 265 F.3d 541 (CA7 2001)	17
Clark v. California , 123 F.3d 1267 (CA9 1997)	17
Coll. Sav. Bank v. Fla. Prepaid Postsecondary Educ. Expense Bd. , 527 U.S. 666 (1999) . . .	9, 13, 14, 21, 23
Constantine v. Rectors & Visitors of George Mason Univ. , 411 F.3d 474 (CA4 2005)	29
Coolbaugh v. Louisiana , 136 F.3d 430 (CA5 1998)	6, 7

Fla. Ass'n of Rehab. Facilities, Inc. v. Fla. Dep't of Health & Rehab. Servs. , 225 F.3d 1208 (CA11 2000) ...	21
Garcia v. S.U.N.Y. Health Scis. Ctr. , 280 F.3d 98 (CA2 2001)	8, 9, 18-20, 23
Garrett v. Univ. of Ala. Bd. of Trs. , 344 F.3d 1288 (CA11 2003) (per curiam)	19, 20
Hosp. Ass'n of N.Y. State, Inc. v. Toia , 577 F.2d 790 (CA2 1978)	21
Jim C. v. United States , 235 F.3d 1079 (CA8 2000) (en banc)	17, 19, 26, 29, 30
Johnson v. Zerbst , 304 U.S. 458 (1938)	14
Koslow v. Commonwealth , 302 F.3d 161 (CA3 2002)	10, 17, 19, 26-29
Lane v. Pena , 518 U.S. 187 (1996)	16, 17
Litman v. George Mason Univ. , 186 F.3d 544 (CA4 1999)	17
Lovell v. Chandler , 303 F.3d 1039 (CA9 2002)	19, 29
Massachusetts v. United States , 435 U.S. 444 (1978) (plurality op.)	24
Miller v. Tex. Tech Univ. Health Scis. Ctr. , 342 F.3d 563 (CA5 2003)	9

Mille v. Tex. Tech Univ. Health Scis. Ctr. , 421 F.3d 342 (CA5 2005) (en banc)	4, 28
New York v. United States , 505 U.S. 144 (1992) ..	24, 25, 27, 28
Nieves-Márquez v. Puerto Rico , 353 F.3d 108 (CA1 2003)	19, 29
Nihiser v. Ohio E.P.A. , 269 F.3d 626 (CA6 2001)	17, 19
Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd. , 339 F.3d 348 (CA5 2003) ...	7
Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd. , 403 F.3d 272 (CA5 2005) (en banc)	4, 9-12, 18
Pederson v. La. State Univ. , 213 F.3d 858 (2000)	17
Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman , 451 U.S. 1 (1981))	14, 22, 23
Pennsylvania v. Union Gas Co. , 491 U.S. 1 (1989) (plurality op.)	13, 21
Reickenbacker v. Foster , 274 F.3d 974 (CA5 2001)	7
Robinson v. Kansas , 295 F.3d 1183 (CA10 2002)	17, 19
Sandoval v. Hagan , 197 F.3d 484 (CA11 1999), rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom Alexander v. Sandoval , 532 U.S. 275 (2001)	17
Seminole Tribe of Fla. v. Florida , 517 U.S. 44 (1996)	13, 20, 21, 24, 26

South Dakota v. Dole , 483 U.S. 203 (1987) . . . i, 4-11, 19, 23-30
Stanley v. Litscher , 213 F.3d 340 (CA7 2000) 19
Tennessee v. Lane , 541 U.S. 509 (2004) 13, 15, 20
United States v. Butler , 297 U.S. 1 (1936) 25, 27
United States v. Lopez , 514 U.S. 549 (1995) 28
Va. Dep't of Educ. v. Riley , 106 F.3d 559 (CA4 1997) (en banc) (plurality op.) 26

Constitutional Provisions and Statutes

U.S. CONST. amend. XI 2
U.S. CONST. art. I, §8, cl. 1 2
20 U.S.C.A. §1681 et seq. 3, 25
28 U.S.C. §1254(1) 2
29 U.S.C. §794(a) 3, 5
29 U.S.C.A. §794 3
42 U.S.C. §12132 5
42 U.S.C. §12202 14
42 U.S.C. §1396a 21

42 U.S.C. §2000d-7	26
42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)	passim
42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)(1)	3, 6, 12
42 U.S.C.A. §2000d et seq.	3
42 U.S.C.A. §6101 et seq.	3

Other Authorities

Lynn A. Baker & Mitchell N. Berman, Getting Off the Dole: Why the Court Should Abandon Its Spending Doctrine, and How a Too-Clever Congress Could Provoke It To Do So, 78 IND. L.J. 459, 466 (2003)	30
PUB. L. No. 94-182, §111(a), 89 Stat. 1051	22
PUB. L. No. 94-552, 90 Stat. 2540 (1976)	21

No. _____

In the Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,

Petitioner,

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA,

Respondent.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

This case presents fundamental questions about sovereign immunity, statutory plain text, and whether the Spending Clause of the Constitution has any meaningful limits. The court of appeals's decision followed its holdings in two companion cases that (1) an admittedly "janus-faced" statute, whose plain text purports to abrogate sovereign immunity, simultaneously serves to clearly and "unambiguously" create a conditional waiver; and (2) a state agency that accepts any federal funds for any purpose must forfeit its Eleventh Amendment immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits. Both holdings undermine critical limits on Congress's authority that the Court recognized in Atascadero State Hospital v. Scanlon and South Dakota v. Dole, and the Court should grant the petition to reaffirm these sound pillars of federalism.

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the court of appeals (Pet. App. 1-3) is not reported. The memorandum opinion and order of the district court denying the Department's motion to dismiss (Pet. App. 4-16) is not reported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on August 25, 2005. Pet. App. 1. Petitioner invokes the Court's jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1254(1).

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

The Spending Clause of Article I of the United States Constitution provides:

"The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises sha'll be uniform throughout the United States . . ." U.S. CONST. art. I, §8, cl. 1.

The Eleventh Amendment to the United States Constitution provides:

"The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State." U.S. CONST. amend. XI.

Section 504(a) of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 provides:

"No otherwise qualified individual with a disability in the United States, as defined in section 705(20) of this title, shall, solely by reason of her or his disability, be excluded from the participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance or under any program or activity conducted by any Executive agency or by the United States Postal Service. The head of each such agency shall promulgate such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the amendments to this section made by the Rehabilitation, Comprehensive Services, and Developmental Disabilities Act of 1978. Copies of any proposed regulation shall be submitted to appropriate authorizing committees of the Congress, and such regulation may take effect no earlier than the thirtieth day after the date on which such regulation is so submitted to such committees." 29 U.S.C. §794(a).

Section 2000d-7(a)(1) of the Civil Rights Remedies Equalization Act of 1986 provides:

"A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C.A. § 794], title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 [20 U.S.C.A. § 1681 et seq.], the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 [42 U.S.C.A. § 6101 et seq.], title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C.A. § 2000d et seq.], or the provisions of any other Federal statute prohibiting discrimination by recipients of Federal financial assistance." 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)(1).

STATEMENT

The Department challenged the district court's subject-matter jurisdiction over Espinoza's Rehabilitation Act claim on the ground that Congress has not validly abrogated or effected a waiver of the State's sovereign immunity from such a suit. The district court rejected this challenge, holding that the Department's acceptance of federal funds waived its immunity under Section 2000d-7(a) of the Civil Rights Remedies Equalization Act of 1986. On appeal, the court of appeals affirmed, Pet. App. 3, applying two decisions rendered in companion cases by a sharply divided en banc court: Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board, 403 F.3d 272 (CA5 2005) (en banc), Pet. App. 17-76, and Miller v. Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, 421 F.3d 342 (CA5 2005) (en banc), Pet. App. 77-94. Pace foreclosed the Department's argument that Section 2000d-7(a) failed to unambiguously create a conditional waiver. And Miller foreclosed the Department's argument that Section 2000d-7(a) is invalid under South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203 (1987), to the extent it predicated a waiver of immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits on the receipt of federal funds wholly unrelated to that statute. The Department petitions this Court for review because the court of appeals's judgment is inconsistent with this Court's decisions, squarely conflicts with a decision of another court of appeals, and wrongly decides an issue of great importance to the States.

Julie Dunlop Espinoza has limited range of motion in her joints because she contracted juvenile rheumatoid arthritis as a child. Pet. App. 5; SR.2.¹ She uses crutches or a motorized scooter because she cannot walk unassisted. Pet. App. 5.

1. Supplemental Record references are designated "SR.(page #)." The original Record mistakenly included internal district-court documents. The Supplemental Record is the corrected Record with the internal court documents removed.

In May 2000, Espinoza applied to renew her driver's license at a Department office. Id. The Department informed Espinoza that it had received information indicating that her condition could prevent her from safely operating a motor vehicle and, to that end, requested that Espinoza take a comprehensive examination to demonstrate her ability to drive. Id. In response, Espinoza's attorney asserted that the Department's request was based solely on the observations of the clerk who processed Espinoza's license renewal and demanded that the Department withdraw its request for a comprehensive examination. SR.4, 12, 102. The Department declined to withdraw its request. Id., at 4, 15, 102.

In September 2000, Espinoza sued the Department under Section 504(a) of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. §794(a). Pet. App. 5. She alleged that, by requiring her to take a comprehensive examination based solely on the license clerk's observations without any further showing that the examination is reasonable and necessary, the Department had "excluded her from participation in, denied her the benefits of, and subjected her to discrimination under a program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance" on the basis of her disability in violation of Section 504. See id. Although the Department does receive some federal funding under other programs, SR.2, 101, it does not receive any funds related to the Rehabilitation Act, C.A. Appellant's Br. 24.

The Department filed a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction based on the State's sovereign immunity from suit under the Eleventh Amendment. Pet. App. 6.² The district

2. Originally, Espinoza also asserted a claim against the Department under Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), 42 U.S.C. §12132. Pet. App. 5. In response to the Department's motion to dismiss the ADA claim, Espinoza conceded that the Eleventh Amendment insulated the Department from this claim. Id., at 10. Accordingly, she sought and obtained leave to amend her complaint to assert her ADA court denied the motion, reasoning that the Department's receipt of federal funds effected a waiver of its immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits under 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)(1). Id., at 10. The Department filed an interlocutory appeal. SR.263. The district court stayed its proceedings pending the appeal. Id., at 274-75.

On appeal, the Department advanced several arguments in support of its immunity from Espinoza's claim. Among these, the Department urged that Section 2000d-7(a) exceeded two limitations on Congress's spending power that the Court enumerated in Dole: (1) that conditions imposed on the recipients of federal funds must be unambiguous; and (2) that the conditions must be reasonably related to the purpose of the funds. 483 U.S., at 207-08.

First, the Department contended that Section 2000d-7(a) does not unambiguously condition States' receipt of federal funds upon voluntary waiver of their immunity from Rehabilitation Act claims because the statute is phrased in terms purporting to abrogate the States' immunity ("[a] State shall not be immune"). See C.A. Appellant's Br. 10-23; 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)(1). At the time the Department accepted the funds at issue in this case, federal courts had construed similar language in the ADA to validly abrogate the State's immunity, rather than to establish a conditional waiver predicated on the State's acceptance of federal funds. See, e.g., Coolbaugh v. Louisiana, 136 F.3d 430 (CA5 1998). This precedent was overruled only after the Department had accepted the funds purporting to waive its immunity in this case—specifically, after the Court ruled in Board of Trustees of the University of Alabama v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356 (2001), that the attempted abrogation upheld in Coolbaugh was an invalid exercise of congressional power. See claim against the Department's Director under the Ex parte Young exception to sovereign immunity. Id., at 11-12. That claim remains pending in the district court.

Reickenbacker v. Foster, 274 F.3d 974, 981 (CA5 2001) (explaining that Garrett effectively overruled Coolbaugh's abrogation holding). Thus, the Department further argued, the abrogation language in Section 2000d-7(a) not only injected ambiguity in the statute in violation of Dole, but that ambiguity also prevented the Department from knowingly waiving its immunity by accepting federal funds in 2000 because, at that time, the Department reasonably believed that the ADA—or similar abrogation language in Section 2000d-7(a)—had already abrogated that immunity. See C.A. Appellant's Br. 36-38.

Second, the Department contended that Section 2000d-7(a) contravenes Dole's requirement that conditions on federal grants be related “to the federal interest in particular national projects or programs,” 483 U.S., at 207, because the statute requires state agencies to forfeit immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits as a condition of accepting any federal funds, regardless of whether the funds are related to the Act or its objectives. See C.A. Appellant's Br. 23-27. Because the Department did not accept any federal funds related to the Act or its goals, the Department urged that Section 2000d-7(a) could not constitutionally effect a waiver of its immunity from Espinoza's suit under Dole. Id., at 27.

In response, the United States intervened in the appeal to defend the constitutionality of Section 2000d-7(a). Before the scheduled oral argument date, however, the court of appeals voted to rehear en banc a companion Rehabilitation Act case that presented the Department's ambiguity and relatedness arguments. Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd., 339 F.3d 348, 349 (CA5 2003). In light of this development, the court of appeals canceled oral argument in the instant case and decided to hold it in abeyance pending the en banc court's decision in Pace. See Pet. App. 3.

In Pace, the en banc court of appeals held that Section 2000d-7(a) satisfied Dole's requirement that spending conditions be unambiguous. Pet. App. 33-34. The court also rejected the related point that the statute's abrogation language prevented a state agency from knowingly waiving its immunity by accepting federal funds. Id., at 39. The court did not reach the relatedness challenge to Section 2000d-7(a) under Dole because it determined that the state defendants in Pace had waived that issue. Id., at 30 n.32.

The court acknowledged that Congress drafted Section 2000d-7(a) with the intent to abrogate States' sovereign immunity under Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Id., at 33. Nevertheless, the court concluded that "the very same provision" purporting to abrogate also established a conditional waiver of immunity that met Dole's "clear and unambiguous" standard. Id., at 34. The court explained that "Congress need not declare in the statute whether it is proceeding under abrogation or waiver, or both." Id. (emphasis added). Thus, while candidly admitting that Section 2000d-7(a) is "janus-faced," the court nonetheless concluded that the statute is "unambiguous, as required by Dole." Id.

By an 8-6 margin, a majority of the court of appeals further rejected the argument that, because the statute's language had previously been interpreted to validly abrogate sovereign immunity, the state defendants could not have known that they retained any immunity to waive by accepting federal funds—a holding that the majority recognized was in direct conflict with the Second Circuit's decision in Garcia v. S.U.N.Y. Health Sciences Center, 280 F.3d 98 (CA2 2001). Pet. App. 34-39. The majority reasoned that, because the Rehabilitation Act itself applies only to entities receiving federal funds, the state defendants knew that they could avoid "abrogation" of their immunity under Section 2000d-7(a) by refusing federal funds. Id., at 36-38. The majority explained that, having held that Section 2000d-7(a) unambiguously established a conditional waiver of immunity, the State was "conclusively presumed to have 'known' that receipt of clearly conditioned federal funds" would result in a waiver of its immunity. Id., at 38.

Writing for six judges in dissent, Judge Jones disagreed that a waiver is “conclusively presumed” to be knowing if the spending condition is deemed unambiguous. See id., at 69 (Jones, J., joined by Jolly, Smith, Barksdale, Garza, and DeMoss, JJ., dissenting). Rather, she stated that satisfaction of Dole’s “unambiguous” requirement “is only half of the waiver equation.” Id. Citing College Savings Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Education Expense Board, 527 U.S. 666, 680-81 (1999), Judge Jones noted that “not only must Congress make clear its intention to . . . condition federal funds, but the State must expressly and unequivocally waive its immunity.” Pet. App. 69. Such a “clear declaration” of the State’s intent to waive immunity requires “clear comprehension of the consequences of the waiver.” Id., at 70 (quotation omitted). That clear comprehension was lacking here, Judge Jones explained, because the state defendants accepted federal funding at a time when extant case law held that the Section 2000d-7(a) language had already abrogated States’ sovereign immunity. Id., at 70-71. Thus, Judge Jones endorsed the Second Circuit’s conclusion that “since ‘the proscriptions of Title II [of the ADA] and §504 are virtually identical, a State accepting federal funds could not have understood that in doing so it was actually abandoning its sovereign immunity from private damage suits, since by all reasonable appearances state sovereign immunity had already been lost.’” Id., at 71-72 (quoting Garcia, 280 F.3d, at 114).

After Pace issued, the Department acknowledged that Pace foreclosed its arguments based on Section 2000d-7(a)’s abrogation language, but it also noted that another en banc companion case presented the Department’s remaining arguments, including its point that Section 2000d-7(a) does not satisfy Dole’s “relatedness” prong. Miller v. Tex. Tech Univ. Health Scis. Ctr., 342 F.3d 563 (CA5 2003). Accordingly, the Department and the United States urged the court of appeals to continue to hold this case in abeyance pending the en banc court’s decision in Miller.

In Miller, by a 9-6 margin, the court of appeals reaffirmed its holding in Pace that the presence of abrogation language in Section 2000d-7(a) did not preclude the state defendants from knowingly waiving their sovereign immunity. Pet. App. 79, 83. Again writing for six judges, Judge Jones disagreed for the reasons expressed in Pace. Id., at 94. The Miller court also rejected the argument that Section 2000d-7(a) fails Dole's requirement that spending conditions be reasonably related to the purpose of the expenditure. Id., at 87-89. The court held that an agency accepting funds waives its immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits "even though the federal funds are not earmarked for programs that further the anti-discrimination and rehabilitation goals of §504." Id., at 87. In so doing, the court adopted the Third Circuit's reasoning in Koslow v. Commonwealth, 302 F.3d 161 (CA3 2002). Koslow, in turn, held first that Dole's relatedness requirement was satisfied because Congress had expressed in the Rehabilitation Act "a clear interest in eliminating disability-based discrimination in state departments"—an interest that "flows with every dollar spent by a department or agency receiving federal funds." Pet. App. 89 (quoting Koslow, 302 F.3d, at 175-76). Second, Koslow noted that Section 2000d-7(a)'s waiver is limited to the agency receiving the funds and does not require waiver by other agencies or the State as a whole, which "helps ensure" that the waiver satisfies Dole's relatedness requirement. Id. (quoting Koslow, 302 F.3d, at 176). Finally, Koslow observed that Rehabilitation Act funds "are frequently not tracked," precluding any determination of how the receiving agency spends the federal funds. Id.

Shortly after Miller was decided, the court of appeals issued its opinion in this case. Pet. App. 1-3. The court of appeals affirmed the district court's order denying the Department's motion to dismiss the instant case on the ground that all of the Department's immunity arguments were foreclosed by Pace and Miller. Id., at 3.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

This petition presents two important questions concerning the reach of Congress's spending power and, thus, the proper balance of power between the federal government and the States. First, the circuits are divided as to the prerequisites for a knowing, valid waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity when States accept federal funds. A sharply divided en banc court of appeals, in an opinion on which the decision below was based, held that Section 2000d-7(a) unambiguously conditions grants of federal funds on States' consent to suit in federal courts, even though the court admitted that the statute is "janus-faced" and by its terms attempts to directly abrogate Eleventh Amendment immunity. According to the court of appeals, any ambiguity in the statute is no barrier to a knowing, valid waiver of immunity. Other circuits have joined the court of appeals in holding that a knowing waiver occurs pursuant to Section 2000d-7(a) when a State accepts federal funds, even if that State could have reasonably believed that its immunity had already been abrogated. The Second Circuit, on the other hand, has squarely held that a State did not knowingly waive its immunity by accepting federal funds under Section 2000d-7(a). The Court should grant certiorari to resolve this conflict.

In a second companion case to the decision below, the en banc court of appeals held that a state agency that accepts any federal funds must forfeit its immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits in aid of Congress's general interest in discouraging disability discrimination. This conclusion directly contravenes the Court's holding in Dole that conditions on federal grants must be related to the federal interest in "particular" national programs. Dole, 483 U.S., at 207. Although all other circuits to decide the question have reached the same conclusion, this lack of a circuit split on the second question does not foreclose review; indeed, this compounded error provides even more reason why the Court should grant certiorari. If allowed to stand, the principle that Congress can condition the States' retained sovereign immunity on the forfeiture of every single penny of federal money for any program whatsoever would render the "relatedness" inquiry of Dole a dead letter.

The Court should grant the petition to resolve the conflict between the Second Circuit and nine other circuits and to address these important issues that implicate the balance of power between the federal government and the States.

I. THE COURT SHOULD GRANT CERTIORARI TO RESOLVE WHETHER 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a) UNAMBIGUOUSLY CONDITIONS THE RECEIPT OF FEDERAL FUNDS UPON THE WAIVER OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY AND TO RESOLVE THE CIRCUIT SPLIT OVER WHETHER STATES KNOWINGLY WAIVE THEIR ELEVENTH AMENDMENT IMMUNITY PURSUANT TO THAT SECTION BY ACCEPTING FEDERAL FUNDS.

In Atascadero State Hospital v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234 (1985), the Court held that Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act failed to validly abrogate state sovereign immunity and failed to condition the receipt of federal funds upon a State's waiver of that immunity because the statute lacked the clear and unambiguous language to do either. In response to Atascadero, Congress enacted the Civil Rights Remedies Equalization Act of 1986, 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a), providing explicit language attempting to abrogate state immunity:

- (1) A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, or the provisions of any other Federal statute prohibiting discrimination by recipients of Federal financial assistance. 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)(1) (emphasis added; citations omitted).

At the time that Congress enacted Section 2000d-7(a), it believed it had the Article I authority to abrogate state sovereign immunity directly, see Pennsylvania v. Union Gas Co., 491 U.S. 1, 19-20 (1989) (plurality op.), and that is exactly what Congress attempted to do. Since 1986, however, the Court's precedents have raised substantial doubts as to the constitutionality of that attempted abrogation. See Seminole Tribe of Fla. v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44 (1996) (holding that Congress lacks the authority to abrogate state sovereign immunity under Article I); Bd. of Trs. of the Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356 (2001) (holding that Title I of the ADA exceeded Congress's authority under Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment).

Last Term, this Court's decision in Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509, 518 (2004), opened a narrow avenue under which Congress's attempted abrogation could possibly be deemed valid; and had this case proceeded as an abrogation case, the court of appeals would presumably have assessed whether Espinoza's claimed right to obtain a drivers' license without any assessment of her physical ability to drive safely was somehow comparable to the fundamental right of access to courts at issue in Lane. That inquiry would have yielded a straightforward and obvious resolution.

Instead, the court treated abrogation language as conditional waiver language, notwithstanding the plain text to the contrary.

A. Unambiguous Statutory Language Is an Essential Prerequisite to a Valid Spending Clause Condition.

The Court has suggested that "Congress may, in the exercise of its spending power, condition its grant of funds to the States upon their taking certain actions [including, possibly, voluntary waiver of sovereign immunity] that Congress could not require them to take, and that acceptance of the funds entails an agreement to the actions." Coll. Sav. Bank, 527 U.S., at 686. However, the Court has also held that "mere receipt of federal funds cannot establish that a State has consented to suit in federal court." Atascadero, 473 U.S., at 246-47. Thus, certain preconditions must be satisfied before acceptance of federal funds may give rise to a waiver of immunity.

First among those criteria is that Congress must "manifest[] a clear intent to condition participation in the programs funded under the Act on a State's consent to waive its constitutional immunity." Id., at 247. "There can, of course, be no knowing acceptance if a State is unaware of the conditions or is unable to ascertain what is expected of it. Accordingly, if Congress intends to impose a condition on the grant of federal moneys, it must do so unambiguously." Pennhurst, 451 U.S., at 17.

Second, the State must clearly and unambiguously demonstrate its knowing intention to voluntarily relinquish its immunity. See Coll. Sav. Bank, 527 U.S., at 682 (citing Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 464 (1938) (holding that effective waiver requires the "intentional relinquishment or abandonment of a known right or privilege") (emphasis added)). "By insisting that Congress speak with a clear voice, we enable the States to exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation." Pennhurst, 451 U.S., at 17.

B. Section 2000d-7(a) Does Not Clearly and Unambiguously Condition the Receipt of Federal Funds on the Waiver of Sovereign Immunity.

Although Section 2000d-7(a) demonstrates Congress's unmistakable desire that States be subject to suit in federal court, it is less than clear that Congress intended to accomplish that objective indirectly by conditioning waiver on the receipt of federal funds instead of directly by abrogation. Congress's declaration that States "shall not be immune . . . from suit in Federal court" is on its face language of abrogation.

Indeed, the Court has observed that almost identical language in the ADA demonstrates clear congressional intent to abrogate state immunity. See Garrett, 531 U.S., at 363-64 (discussing 42 U.S.C. §12202, which states “[a] State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment the Constitution of the United States from an action in [a] Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction for a violation of this chapter” (emphasis added)); Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509, 518 (2004) (same).

Tellingly, terms such as “waiver” or “condition,” which would naturally suggest an effort to invite States to consent, are absent from either statute. And, given the existing state of the law in 1986, Congress had no reason to attempt a conditional waiver—because at the time it believed it had full abrogation authority.

1. The reference to “federal funds” in Section 2000d-7(a) does not transform the abrogation language into clear and unambiguous conditional waiver language.

The principal reed upon which the court of appeals relied in finding conditional waiver language was the inference it drew from the statutory phrase “by recipients of Federal financial assistance” at the end of Section 2000d-7(a). See Pet. App. 29, 36-38. That pedicel cannot support such weight.

First, that it is merely an inference by itself refutes that Congress has acted “unequivocal[ly]” or “manifest[ed] a clear intent to condition participation in the programs funded under the Act on a State’s consent to waive its constitutional immunity.” Atascadero, 473 U.S., at 247.

Second, as the six dissenting judges observed, Pace “conflates abrogation and waiver.” Pet. App. 72. Each concept is distinct. With abrogation, Congress is the lone actor. Assuming it has ample authority, once Congress unilaterally abrogates the States’ immunity, that immunity is no more. In contrast, waiver is a two-step process. First, Congress must unambiguously condition receipt of funds upon waiver, and second, States must unambiguously express their waiver.

With waiver, there is a temporal ordering; by analogy to contract, Congress extends an offer, and the States accept (or not). Section 2000d-7(a) exhibits none of that temporal priority. Instead, it purports to be unilateral and immediately self-executing: "A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment."³

2. Dicta from Lane v. Pena does not support the court of appeals's reading of Section 2000d-7(a) as clear and unambiguous waiver language.

The second support for the court of appeals's conclusion was a misreading of dicta from Lane v. Pena, 518 U.S. 187 (1996). See Pet. App. 32 n.38. Pena, however, did not address the issue of state sovereign immunity. Instead, the issue was whether Section 2000d-7(a) subjected the federal government to private suits for violations of Section 504. See 518 U.S., at 197-98. In answering that question in the negative, the Court discussed the effect of Section 2000d-7(a) on the States' immunity:

"Section [2000d-7(a)] was enacted in response to our decision in [Atascadero], where we held that Congress had not unmistakably expressed its intent to abrogate the States' Eleventh Amendment immunity in the Rehabilitation Act . . . By enacting [Section 2000d-7(a)], Congress sought to provide the sort of unequivocal waiver that our precedents demand Given the care with which Congress responded to our decision in Atascadero by crafting an unambiguous waiver of the States' Eleventh Amendment immunity in [Section 2000d-7(a)], it would be ironic indeed to conclude that that same provision 'unequivocally' establishes a waiver of the Federal Government's sovereign immunity." Id., at 198, 200 (emphasis added).

3. To be sure, a state agency could perhaps avoid federal suit by renouncing all federal funds from all federal sources, but that inverts the order; it suggests an abrogation, and then a subsequent vehicle for a State to act to circumvent the abrogation in the future rather than a conditional offer yielding a future possible acceptance and waiver of immunity. Phrased differently—again by analogy to contract—a proper conditional waiver is void unless and until a State knowingly and voluntarily accepts the condition and chooses to waive sovereign immunity; Section 2000d-7(a), by contrast, is immediately operative and, at most, makes Congress's attempted abrogation voidable, should a state agency subsequently choose to renounce all federal funds from all sources.

The court of appeals, and numerous other circuits, have seized upon the Court's reference to Section 2000d-7(a) as "an unambiguous waiver" as conclusively determining that that Section constituted conditional waiver language. See, e.g., Robinson v. Kansas, 295 F.3d 1183, 1189-90 (CA10 2002), cert. denied, 123 S.Ct. 2574 (2003); Koslow, 302 F.3d, at 170; Cherry v. Univ. of Wis. Sys. Bd. of Regents, 265 F.3d 541, 555 (CA7 2001); Nihiser v. Ohio Envtl. Prot. Agency, 269 F.3d 626, 628 (CA6 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 922 (2002); Pederson v. La. State Univ., 213 F.3d 858, 876 (2000); Jim C. v. United States, 235 F.3d 1079, 1082 (CA8 2000) (en banc); Litman v. George Mason Univ., 186 F.3d 544, 554 (CA4 1999); Sandoval v. Hagan, 197 F.3d 484, 493 (CA11 1999), rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom Alexander v. Sandoval, 532 U.S. 275 (2001); Clark v. California, 123 F.3d 1267, 1271 (CA9 1997).

Despite the multiplicity of circuits, the Pena dictum said no such thing. In full context, Pena was addressing abrogation, not waiver, despite the passing use of the word "waiver." "Abrogation" and "waiver" were seemingly used interchangeably in the discussion, and, critically, the Court used the word "waiver" as an action performed by Congress—not the States. Pena, 518 U.S., at 198, 200. Congress can "waive" the States' immunity only by unilaterally abrogating it. Thus, the Court presumably intended "waiver" to mean "abrogation"; in any event, the courts of appeals' repeated reliance on this passage, as conclusively resolving the import of Section 2000d-7(a), is surely misplaced.

C. The Fifth Circuit's Decision Conflicts with This Court's Precedent and with a Decision of the Second Circuit.

The court of appeals's decision in Pace widens an existing split between the Second Circuit and every other circuit to consider whether Section 2000d-7(a) can form the basis of a knowing waiver. Moreover, the conclusion that Section 2000d-7(a) is unambiguous conflicts with the Court's holding in Atascadero that the clear-statement rule requires notice not only of the fact that immunity may be lost, but also of the method—whether abrogation, consent, or both. The Court should grant certiorari to resolve the circuit split and to clarify its precedent.

1. The Fifth Circuit's decision widens the circuit split regarding Section 2000d-7(a).

The circuits are divided as to whether a State's acceptance of federal funds necessarily gives rise to a knowing, valid waiver of state sovereign immunity under Section 2000d-7(a). After examining the language and history of Section 2000d-7(a), the Second Circuit in Garcia held that a State did not knowingly waive its immunity if it could have reasonably believed that its immunity had already been abrogated. See 280 F.3d, at 114.⁴ Because, at the time it accepted federal funds, New York reasonably believed it had no immunity to waive, Garcia held that the acceptance did not operate as a knowing waiver. Id. The six-judge dissent in Pace would likewise have adopted the Second Circuit's approach. See Pet. App. 71-72.

In direct conflict with this approach, the Pace majority joined eight other circuits in holding that Section 2000d-7(a) unambiguously conditions acceptance of federal funds on waiver of state sovereign immunity and that the statute can support a knowing waiver. See id., at 34-39; Nieves-Márquez v. Puerto Rico, 353 F.3d 108, 129-30 (CA1 2003); A.W. v. Jersey City Pub. Schs., 341 F.3d 234, 244-51 (CA3 2003); Bruggeman v. Blagojevich, 324 F.3d 906, 912 (CA7 2003); Garrett v. Univ. of Ala. Bd. of Trs., 344 F.3d 1288, 1292-93 (CA11 2003) (per curiam); Lovell v. Chandler, 303 F.3d 1039, 1051-52 (CA9 2002); Koslow v. Commonwealth, 302 F.3d 161, 172 (CA3 2002); Robinson v. Kansas, 295 F.3d 1183, 1189-90 (CA10 2002); Nihiser v. Ohio E.P.A., 269 F.3d 626, 628 (CA6 2001); Jim C. v. United States, 235 F.3d 1079, 1081 (CA8 2000) (en banc); Stanley v. Litscher, 213 F.3d 340, 344 (CA7 2000).⁵

4. Although Garcia did find Section 2000d-7(a) to be waiver language, 280 F.3d, at 113, it found no knowing waiver by the State.

The court of appeals's approach posits that what a State could have reasonably believed is irrelevant: as long as a federal statute can be deemed to provide in unambiguous language that acceptance of the funds triggers loss of immunity, the waiver is necessarily knowing and valid. See, e.g., Pet. App. 38 ("Under Dole, if the clear-statement requirement is met, the state is conclusively presumed to have known that receipt of clearly conditioned federal funds requires the state to abide by the condition.").

That approach conflicts directly with the Second Circuit's, that the reasonable understanding of the State is integral to assessing whether the State knowingly and voluntarily waived immunity. See Garcia, 280 F.3d, at 114. And, accordingly, the Second Circuit

5. The Garcia court made the split explicit: "Several of our sister circuits have held that a state's acceptance of federal funds constitutes a waiver of its sovereign immunity under § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. These cases are unpersuasive . . ." 280 F.3d, at 115 n.5 (citations omitted).

held that, under the facts there presented, New York's acceptance of federal funds did not waive sovereign immunity.⁶

2. The Fifth Circuit's contradicts this Court's precedents by inferring conditional waiver from a statute that is, at a minimum, ambiguous.

As discussed above, supra Pet. 12-18, the better reading of the statute is as an unambiguous attempt at abrogation. That reading is most consistent with the plain text of the statute, and is also consistent with the history and context from which the statute arose.

An intent to abrogate would have made sense when Section 2000d-7(a) was passed—in 1986, ten years before the Court’s decision in Seminole Tribe of Florida v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44 (1996). Section 2000d-7(a) was enacted in response to the Court’s 1985 decision in Atascadero, which held that Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act did not express clear congressional intent either

6. To be sure, Garcia's express rationale was limited to a specific window of time in which this Court's jurisprudence indicated that Title II of the ADA and—because of its almost identical remedies—the Rehabilitation Act validly abrogated States' immunity. See 280 F.3d, at 114. The dissenting judges in Pace and Miller believe that the window would have closed when the Court decided Garrett. See Pet.App. 72 n.117. Thus, according to the dissent, when the Court held in Garrett that Title I of the ADA was an invalid attempt to abrogate States' immunity, States could no longer reasonably believe that their immunity had been validly abrogated by either Title II of the ADA or by the Rehabilitation Act. See id. After Garrett, therefore, the acceptance of federal funds could accomplish a knowing waiver. See id. However, the Court's decision in Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509 (2004), may have created new uncertainty, because it held that certain applications of Title II are indeed a valid exercise of Congress's power to abrogate. See id., at 533-34. This uncertainty is unlikely to abate, given the Court's declaration in Lane that the validity of each application of Title II would be decided on a case-by-case basis. See id.

to (1) abrogate states' Eleventh Amendment immunity or (2) to condition federal funding on States' consent to waive that immunity. See Atascadero, 473 U.S., at 247.

At that time, Congress believed its Commerce Clause power was sufficient to abrogate States' immunity. See Pennsylvania v. Union Gas Co., 491 U.S. 1, 19-20 (1989) (plurality op.) (holding that Commerce Clause granted Congress the power to abrogate state sovereign immunity). It was not until ten years later that the Court overruled Union Gas and held that Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment was Congress's only authority to abrogate Eleventh Amendment immunity. Seminole Tribe, 517 U.S., at 72-73. Therefore, when Congress enacted Section 2000d-7(a), it would have had no reason to seek the States' consent to waive their immunity. Instead, at that time, Congress believed it could abrogate that immunity outright.

But, even assuming arguendo that Section 2000d-7(a) is not an unambiguous abrogation, it is—at most—an ambiguous waiver.

Had Congress intended to enact a conditional waiver of immunity, it knew how to do so using unambiguous language. In 1975, for example, Congress amended the Medicaid Act to require States to waive Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit for violations of that Act. See PUB. L. NO. 94-182, §111, 89 Stat. 1051 (1975) (repealed 1976). The provision generated tremendous opposition from the States, see Fla. Ass'n of Rehab. Facilities, Inc. v. Fla. Dep't of Health & Rehab. Servs., 225 F.3d 1208, 1226 n.14 (CA11 2000); Hosp. Ass'n of N.Y. State, Inc. v. Toia, 577 F.2d 790, 795 (CA2 1978), however, and was repealed during the next session of Congress, see PUB. L. NO. 94-552, 90 Stat. 2540 (1976); Toia, 577 F.2d, at 795.

The language repealed from 42 U.S.C. §1396a—unlike Section 2000d-7(a)—unambiguously established a voluntary condition:

a State plan for medical assistance must include a consent by the States to the exercise of the judicial power of the United States in any suit brought against the State or a State officer by or on behalf of any provider of services . . . with respect to the application of subsection (a)(13)(D) to services furnished under such plan after June 30, 1975, and a waiver by the State of any immunity from such a suit conferred by the 11th amendment to the Constitution or otherwise. PUB. L. NO. 94-182, §111(a), 89 Stat. 1051 (emphasis added).

Unlike Section 2000d-7(a), this statute used the words “consent” and “waiver.” See id. In contrast, Congress’s injection into Section 2000d-7(a) of express abrogation language calls into question whether the necessary predicate to waiver—unequivocal statutory language—is present. When viewed in light of the historical context and Congress’s demonstrated ability to speak unmistakably in different contexts, Section 2000d-7(a) falls short of the unambiguous language required for Congress to validly invite States to waive sovereign immunity. Congress must “mak[e] its intention unmistakably clear in the language of the statute.” Atascadero, 473 U.S., at 242. It “must speak with a clear voice,” and do so “unambiguously,” in order to “enable the States to exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation.” Pennhurst, 451 U.S., at 17.

Instead, the court of appeals deemed the identical language to be both language of abrogation and waiver. “Just because particular language may or may not function with equal efficacy under both exceptions to Eleventh Amendment immunity, does not mean that it fails the clear statement rule.” Pet. App. 34. But that approach is identical to the argument advanced—and rejected—in College Savings Bank:

“As further evidence that constructive waiver is little more than abrogation under another name, consider the revealing facts of this case: The statutory provision relied upon to demonstrate that Florida constructively waived its sovereign immunity is the very same provision that purported to abrogate it.” 527 U.S., at 684 (emphasis added).

Just so, the court of appeals found itself ascribing abrogation and conditional waiver to the identical statutory text, a tension resolved by describing Section 2000d-7(a) as “janus-faced,” but nonetheless somehow also “unambiguous, as required by Dole.” Pet. App. 34. The court arrived at this remarkable conclusion by limiting the requisite level of clarity to only the fact that immunity may be lost, and not to the method by which it is removed. See id. (“Congress need not declare in the statute whether it is proceeding under abrogation or waiver, or both.”).

To the contrary, clear notice of the method—i.e., whether immunity is to be forfeited by voluntary or involuntary means—is also required. This Court so indicated in Atascadero:

“[T]he Rehabilitation Act does not evince an unmistakable congressional purpose, pursuant to § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment, to subject unconsenting States to the jurisdiction of the federal courts. The Act likewise falls far short of manifesting a clear intent to condition participation in the programs funded under the Act on a State’s consent to waive its constitutional immunity.” Atascadero, 473 U.S., at 247.

Clear notice of the method is vital to States’ ability to “exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation.” Pennhurst, 451 U.S., at 17. If a statute abrogates a State’s immunity, then the State—having already lost its immunity—may accept federal funds without fear of additional consequences. See Pet. App. 71-72 (citing Garcia, 280 F.3d, at 114). If, on the other hand, a statute does not abrogate, but gives States the choice whether to waive immunity in exchange for a federal benefit, then the States must weigh carefully the competing interests before accepting the funds.

Reading the plain language of Section 2000d-7(a), it is impossible to discern with any degree of certainty that Congress's intent was to create a conditional waiver. Indeed, such a reading is plausible only in hindsight—some twenty years after the statute was passed and ten years after Seminole Tribe—in an attempt to revive the statute's attempted abrogation. But, as the Court cautioned, the rewriting of statutes based on what Congress might have done had it possessed the benefit of hindsight is not the task of the judiciary: “If that effort is to be made, it should be made by Congress, and not by the federal courts.” Seminole Tribe, 517 U.S. at 76.

II. THE COURT OF APPEALS'S DECISION DISREGARDS DOLE'S RELATEDNESS LIMITATION ON CONGRESS'S SPENDING CLAUSE AUTHORITY AND THEREBY THREATENS THE CONSTITUTIONAL BALANCE OF POWER BETWEEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND THE STATES.

Another important limitation on Congress's Spending Clause power is that, while “Congress may attach conditions on the receipt of federal funds,” Dole, 483 U.S., at 206, such conditions “might be illegitimate if they are unrelated ‘to the federal interest in particular national projects or programs,’” id., at 207 (emphasis added) (quoting Massachusetts v. United States, 435 U.S. 444, 461 (1978) (plurality op.)); see also New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 167 (1992) (noting that conditions on federal funds must “bear some relationship to the purpose of the federal spending”). Yet, the court of appeals has rendered this limitation nugatory by holding that the federal government’s general interest in combating disability discrimination provides a sufficient nexus to condition any and all federal grants on a state agency’s waiver of immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits. Pet. App. 89. That the court of appeals joined six other circuits in this erroneous conclusion only underscores that this is a recurring issue—one that now requires the Court’s intervention to restore meaning to Dole’s check on Congress’s spending authority, thus preserving the balance between federal and state power envisioned by the Framers.

A. The Relatedness Limitation on Congress's Spending Power Is a Critical Component of Our Federalism.

The principle that conditions attached to a federal grant must be related to the purpose of the grant "is fundamental to our constitutional structure." Barbour v. Wash. Metro. Area Transit Auth., 374 F.3d 1161, 1171 (CADC 2004) (Sentelle, J., dissenting). The Court has recognized that, without this limitation, "the spending power could render academic the Constitution's other grants and limits of federal authority." New York, 505 U.S., at 167. That is, Congress could simply ignore the boundaries of its power established elsewhere in the Constitution by pursuing its regulatory objectives through conditions attached to any and all disbursements to the States. The Court long ago explained that the Framers could not have contemplated this result, rejecting the suggestion that,

"[although] the makers of the Constitution, in erecting the federal government, intended sedulously to limit and define its powers, so as to reserve to the states and the people sovereign power, to be wielded by the states and their citizens and not to be invaded by the United States, they nevertheless by a single clause gave power to the Congress to tear down the barriers, to invade the states' jurisdiction, and to become a parliament of the whole people, subject to no restrictions save such as are self-imposed." United States v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1, 78 (1936).

The "relatedness" requirement cabins in this potentially limitless authority for indirect regulation of the States by ensuring that such regulation extends no further than Congress's stated interest in providing the funds.

The need for this check against congressional overreaching through spending conditions is not merely an abstract concern, for two reasons. First, the Court has in recent years recognized real limits on Congress's authority to strip States of their sovereign immunity and subject them to suit. For example, the Court has held that Congress cannot abrogate States' immunity under Article I of the Constitution, Seminole Tribe, 517 U.S., at 72-73, and that congressional abrogation of States' immunity under Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment must reflect "congruence and proportionality" to "the injury to be prevented or remedied," Garrett, 531 U.S., at 365. Yet, Congress could readily circumvent these holdings if it could extract waivers of state agencies' immunity by forcing them into a Hobson's choice between relinquishing their immunity and forfeiting all federal funds advanced for any purpose. See Jim C., 235 F.3d, at 1085 (Bowman, J., dissenting) (observing that, without proper application of the relatedness requirement, "[b]y resort to the spending power . . . Congress could achieve indirectly the same abrogation of Eleventh Amendment immunity it could not achieve directly"). Dole's relatedness limitation, properly applied, forecloses such an outcome.

Second, the States' supposed ability to avoid congressional mandates simply by refusing the offered funds becomes illusory if Congress can condition the grant of any and all financial assistance on immunity waivers that bear no relation to the federal interest in advancing the funds. Under these circumstances, "[g]iven the financial and political reality within which state governments struggle to fund their operations adequately, most if not all of the states would yield." Jim C., 235 F.3d, at 1085 (Bowman, J., dissenting).

Indeed, writing for an en banc plurality, Judge Luttig has powerfully cautioned against such expansive interpretations of Congress's spending power "in a time when the several States have become increasingly dependent on the Federal Government for funds, because the Federal Government has increasingly become dependent upon the revenues from taxation it receives from the citizens of the several States." Va. Dep't of Educ. v. Riley, 106 F.3d 559, 570 (CA4 1997) (en banc) (plurality op.). Dole's relatedness requirement ensures that Congress may not so easily “invade the states’ jurisdiction.” Butler, 297 U.S., at 78.

B. The Court of Appeals’s Decision Disregards Dole’s Relatedness Requirement.

In Dole, the Court held that the relatedness requirement was met only because the condition imposed on the grant of federal highway funds—requiring States to adopt a minimum drinking age of 21—“directly related to one of the main purposes for which highway funds are expended—safe interstate travel.” 483 U.S., at 208 (emphasis added). By contrast, in the companion case that controlled the decision below, the court of appeals did not even examine the nature or purpose of the federal funds received, holding broadly that the relatedness requirement is satisfied in Rehabilitation Act suits against a state agency that receives any federal funds. See Pet. App. 89. The court of appeals instead identified three other limitations in Section 2000d-7(a) that it believed supplied the requisite relationship between the funds and the waiver condition. See id. In fact, these supposed limitations do not meaningfully limit Congress’s spending power and, consequently, the court of appeals’s holding seriously undermines Dole’s relatedness requirement.

First, the court of appeals reasoned that Congress’s “‘clear interest in eliminating disability discrimination in state departments or agencies . . . flows with every dollar spent by a department or agency receiving federal funds.’” Id. (quoting Koslow, 302 F.3d, at 175-76). This rationale cannot be squared with Dole’s requirement that there be a relationship between the waiver condition and the federal interest in “particular” projects. 483 U.S., at 207. Moreover, as Judge Sentelle explained in dissenting from the D.C. Circuit’s adoption of this reasoning, allowing Congress to condition federal grants based on such generalized interests produces a form of unfettered authority that clashes with the constitutional framework establishing a federal government of limited powers:

"The majority and the government are saying that the legislature can identify something a state does that it does not like—in this case, discriminate on the basis of disability—and condition any grant of funds on a state's not doing that act any more, assuming the condition is otherwise constitutionally valid. Presumably, Congress has an 'interest' in preventing states from doing anything with its funds that it does not like, and there is nothing magical about disability discrimination that makes the 'interest' in preventing it distinctively federal. If such an 'interest' were enough to sustain such legislation, that would leave the Spending Clause without any 'judicially enforceable outer limit [.]' In a system in which the federal government's powers remain limited and enumerated, such an argument must fail." Barbour, 374 F.3d, at 1172-73 (Sentelle, J., dissenting) (quoting United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 566 (1995)).

In other words, if the court of appeals were correct that Congress's general opposition to disability discrimination provides a sufficient nexus to impose waiver conditions on any federal grant, then Dole's relatedness requirement would be rendered superfluous.

Second, the court of appeals stated that Section 2000d-7(a)'s waiver applies only to the agency that accepts the funds, and not to other agencies or the State as a whole, which "helps ensure" that Dole's relatedness requirement is met. Pet. App. 89 (quoting Koslow, 302 F.3d, at 176). But because Section 2000d-7(a) attaches its waiver condition to the receipt of any federal funds, this limitation at most only ensures that the relatively few state agencies receiving no federal funding whatsoever will avoid the condition. This limitation in no way advances the requirement that the funding condition "bear some relationship to the purpose of the federal spending." New York, 505 U.S., at 167 (emphasis added). Indeed, neither in this case nor in Miller did the court of appeals examine the purpose of the funds received by the defendant agencies; it was sufficient that the agencies admitted to receiving even one federal dollar.

Finally, the court of appeals cited the “practical” consideration that an agency’s federal funding cannot be traced to the particular practice challenged by the plaintiff’s Rehabilitation Act suit. See Pet. App. 89. This is a straw man. No one seriously contends that Dole demands such a specific connection between the federal funds and the action that allegedly violates the Rehabilitation Act. For example, the Department does not argue that Espinoza must show that federal funds received by the Department paid for the facility where she applied for her drivers license or for the licensing program in general. If the Department had received any Rehabilitation Act funds—which it did not—that would surely satisfy Dole’s relatedness requirement, assuming that, as in Dole, the condition was found to be “directly related to one of the main purposes for which [the] funds are expended.” 483 U.S., at 208 (emphasis added).

C. The Courts of Appeals’ Recurring Disregard of Dole’s Relatedness Requirement Warrants the Court’s Review.

There is no circuit split on the question of Section 2000d-7(a) and Dole’s relatedness requirement. To date, six circuits have agreed with the Fifth Circuit, upholding Section 2000d-7(a) against relatedness challenges based on similar reasoning. See Constantine v. Rectors & Visitors of George Mason Univ., 411 F.3d 474, 493 (CA4 2005) (noting that waiver applies only to agency that receives funds); Barbour, 374 F.3d, at 1169 (citing Congress’s desire that no federal funds be used to facilitate disability discrimination); Nieves-Márquez v. Puerto Rico, 353 F.3d 108, 128 (CA1 2003) (same); Lovell v. Chandler, 303 F.3d 1039, 1051 (CA9 2002) (citing Congress’s interest that federal funds not be used in a discriminatory manner and that waiver applies only to agency that receives federal funds); Koslow, 302 F.3d, at 175-76 (providing three reasons adopted by the Fifth Circuit in Miller); Jim C., 235

F.3d, at 1081 (noting that waiver applies only to agency that receives funds).

In the courts of appeals, Dole's relatedness requirement has little if any force. As two commentators have explained, even outside of the Rehabilitation Act context, the absence of guidance from the Court on the relatedness ceiling has diluted its meaning:

“Although no court has denied the existence or justiciability of Dole's ‘relatedness’ requirement, nearly all have given it only cursory attention. In most instances in which the requirement has been a focus of litigation, the court has done little more than assert, without analysis or elaboration, that the challenged condition is ‘reasonably related to the federal interest in the national program.’ Thus, the lower courts have had little difficulty upholding a wide range of funding conditions without a clearly explained relationship to the underlying legislation” Lynn A. Baker & Mitchell N. Berman, Getting Off the Dole: Why the Court Should Abandon Its Spending Doctrine, and How a Too-Clever Congress Could Provoke It To Do So, 78 IND. L.J. 459, 466 (2003) (emphasis added).

The issue has percolated long enough. Because the court of appeals held that Section 2000d-7(a) satisfies Dole's relatedness requirement—despite concluding that it conditions a waiver of sovereign immunity on the receipt of even a single penny of federal money, from any source, for any purpose—this case provides an ideal vehicle for the Court to revisit the question it reserved in Dole and define the “outer bounds” of this important check on Congress's Spending Clause power.

CONCLUSION

The Court should grant the petition for writ of certiorari.

Respectfully submitted,

GREG ABBOTT
Attorney General of Texas

BARRY R. MCBEE
First Assistant Attorney General

EDWARD D. BURBACH
Deputy Attorney General
for Litigation

R. TED CRUZ
Solicitor General
Counsel of Record

RANCE L. CRAFT
Assistant Solicitor General

AMY WARR
Assistant Solicitor General

Office of the Attorney General
P.O. Box 12548
Austin, Texas 78711
(512) 936-1700

November 2005

(3)
FEB 27 2006

No. 05-671

OFFICE OF THE CLERK

In the Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY, PETITIONER

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA, ET AL.

ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION

PAUL D. CLEMENT
Solicitor General
Counsel of Record

WAN J. KIM
Assistant Attorney General

JESSICA DUNSAV SILVER

SARAH E. HARRINGTON

Attorneys

Department of Justice
Washington, D.C. 20530-0001
(202) 514-2217

QUIESTION PRESENTED

Whether petitioner is subject to suit for damages for disability discrimination under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. 794, because it waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity when it applied for and accepted federal financial assistance.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
Opinions below	1
Jurisdiction	1
Statement	1
Argument	9
Conclusion	17

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases:

Alexander v. Sandoval , 532 U.S. 275 (2001)	15
Arkansas Dep't of Educ. v. Jim C. , 533 U.S. 949 (2001)	9
Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon , 473 U.S. 234 (1985)	2
Barbour v. WMATA , 374 F.3d 1161 (D.C. Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S. Ct. 1591 (2005)	10
Barnes v. Gorman , 536 U.S. 181 (2002)	2
Board of Educ. v. Mergens , 496 U.S. 226 (1990)	16
Chandler v. Lovell , 537 U.S. 1105 (2003)	9
Douglas v. California Dep't of Youth Auth. , 271 F.3d 812, opinion amended, 271 F.3d 910 (9th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 924 (2002)	11
Garcia v. SUNY Health Scis. Ctr. , 280 F.3d 98 (2d Cir. 2001)	10, 11, 12
Grove City Coll. v. Bell , 465 U.S. 555 (1984)	15
Hawaii v. Vinson , 537 U.S. 1104 (2003)	9
Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Educ. , 544 U.S. 167 (2005)	8

Cases—Continued:	Page
Jim C. v. United States , 235 F.3d 1079 (8th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 949 (2001)	11
Kansas v. Robinson , 539 U.S. 926 (2003)	9
Koslow v. Pennsylvania , 302 F.3d 161 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1232 (2003)	7, 10
Lapides v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys. , 535 U.S. 613 (2002)	12
Lau v. Nichols , 414 U.S. 563 (1974)	15
Litman v. George Mason Univ. , 186 F.3d 544 (4th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1181 (2000)	10
Louisiana Dep’t of Educ. v. Johnson , cert. denied, No. 05-617 (Feb. 21, 2006)	8, 9
Louisiana State Bd. of Elementary & Secondary Educ. v. Pace , 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005)	6, 9, 12
Massachusetts v. United States , 435 U.S. 444 (1978)	14
Miller v. Texas Tech Univ. Health Scis. Ctr. , 421 F.3d 342 (5th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, No. 05-617 (Feb. 21, 2006)	6, 7
NCAA v. Smith , 525 U.S. 459 (1999)	15
Nieves-Marquez v. Puerto Rico , 353 F.3d 108 (1st Cir. 2003)	10
Nihiser v. Ohio EPA , 269 F.3d 626 (6th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 922 (2002)	11
Ohio EPA v. Nihiser , 536 U.S. 922 (2002)	9
Oklahoma v. United States Civil Serv. Comm’n , 330 U.S. 127 (1947)	16
Olmstead v. L.C. , 527 U.S. 581 (1999)	2

Cases—Continued:	Page
Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd. , 403 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005)	4, 5, 6, 11
Penrhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman , 451 U.S. 1 (1981)	14
Pennsylvania Dep't of Corr. v. Koslow , 537 U.S. 1232 (2003)	9
Robinson v. Kansas , 295 F.3d 1183 (10th Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 539 U.S. 926 (2003)	11
Sabri v. United States , 541 U.S. 600 (2004)	14
Sandoval v. Hagan , 197 F.3d 484 (11th Cir. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 532 U.S. 275 (2001)	11
School Bd. v. Arline , 480 U.S. 273 (1987)	15
South Dakota v. Dole , 483 U.S. 203 (1987)	4, 9, 13, 14
Stanley v. Litscher , 213 F.3d 340 (7th Cir. 2000)	11
Tennessee v. Lane , 541 U.S. 509 (2004)	12
WMATA v. Barbour , 125 S. Ct. 1591 (2005)	9
Young, Ex parte , 209 U.S. 123 (1908)	3
 Constitution and statutes:
U.S. Const.:
Art. I (Spending Clause)	4, 5, 13, 13, 14, 15, 16
Amend. I	15
Amend. XI	2, 3, 4, 7, 9, 16
Civil Rights Act of 1964, Tit. VI, 42 U.S.C., 2000d et seq.	14, 15, 16
Education Amendments of 1972, Tit. IX, 20 U.S.C. 1681 et seq.	14, 15, 16
Equal Access Act, 20 U.S.C. 4071 et seq.	16

Statutes—Continued:	Page
Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. 701 et seq. :
29 U.S.C. 794 (§ 504)	passim
29 U.S.C. 794(a) (§ 504(a))	1, 2, 13
29 U.S.C. 794a(a)(2) (§ 505(a)(2), 92 Stat. 1982)	12
Rehabilitation Act Amendments of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-506, § 1003, 100 Stat. 1845 (42
U.S.C. 2000d-7)	passim
42 U.S.C. 2000d-7(a)	2, 11, 12
28 U.S.C. 2403(a)	3

In the Supreme Court of the United States

No. 05-671

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY, PETITIONER

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA, ET AL.

*ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT*

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the court of appeals (Pet. App. 1-3) is unreported. The opinion of the district court (Pet. App. 4-16) is unreported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on August 25, 2005. The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed on November 22, 2005. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254.

STATEMENT

1. Section 504(a) of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 prohibits any "program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance" from "subject[ing] any person] to discrimination" on the basis of disability. 29 U.S.C.

794(a). Individuals have a private right of action for damages against entities that receive federal funds and violate that prohibition. See 29 U.S.C. 794(a); Barnes v. Gorman, 536 U.S. 181 (2002); Olmstead v. L.C., 527 U.S. 581, 590 n.4 (1999).

In 1985, this Court held that the text of Section 504 was not sufficiently clear to evidence Congress's intent to condition federal funding on a waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity for private damages actions against state entities. See Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234, 245-246 (1985). In response to Atascadero, Congress enacted 42 U.S.C. 2000d-7 as part of the Rehabilitation Act Amendments of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-506, § 1003, 100 Stat. 1845. Section 2000d-7(a) provides, in relevant part:

(1) A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from a suit in Federal court for a violation of section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C. 794] ***.

(2) In a suit against a State for a violation of a statute referred to in paragraph (1), remedies (including remedies both at law and in equity) are available for such a violation to the same extent as such remedies are available for such a violation in the suit against any public or private entity other than a State.

42 U.S.C. 2000d-7(a).

2. Respondent Julie Espinoza suffers from a disability under the Rehabilitation Act. In September 2000, she sued the Texas Department of Public Safety, alleging that the agency discriminated against her on the basis of her disability in violation of Section 504 and other state and federal laws when it required her to submit to a comprehensive examination in order to qualify for a driver's license. Pet. App. 5. Espinoza initially sought damages, attorneys fees, declaratory relief, and a temporary and permanent injunction. Ibid. The state agency moved to dismiss Espinoza's Section 504 claims as barred by its Eleventh Amendment immunity. Id. at 6. Subsequently, Espinoza moved to amend her complaint to remove her claims for damages against the agency and to add its director in his official capacity as a defendant, for purposes of seeking prospective injunctive relief under the doctrine of Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123 (1908). Pet. App. 10-11.

The district court simultaneously ruled on both motions, granting the motion to amend the complaint and denying the State's motion to dismiss. Pet. App. 15. With respect to the latter motion, the court held that Congress validly conditioned receipt of federal funds on the agency's waiver of sovereign immunity to Section 504 claims and that, by accepting federal funds under such conditions, the agency had waived its sovereign immunity. Id. at 8-10. The State filed an interlocutory appeal to challenge the denial of its Eleventh Amendment immunity defense. Id. at 3.

3. The United States intervened on appeal pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 2403(a) to defend the constitutionality of the statutory provisions conditioning the receipt of federal financial assistance on a knowing and voluntary waiver of sovereign immunity. Before hearing oral argument, the Fifth Circuit held the case in abeyance pending decisions from the en banc court in Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board, No. 01-31026, and in Miller v. Texas Tech Health Sciences Center, Nos. 02-10190, 02-30318, and 02-30389.

4. On March 8, 2005, the en banc court of appeals issued its decision in Pace, holding that the state agency defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity to claims under Section 504 when it accepted federal funds, and that Section 504 is a valid exercise of Congress's authority under the Spending Clause. Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd., 403 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005); Pet. App. 17-76. Relying on this Court's decision in South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203 (1987), the court held that "congressional spending programs that are enacted in pursuit of the general welfare and unambiguously condition a state's acceptance of federal funds on reasonably related requirements are constitutional unless they are either (1) independently prohibited or (2) coercive." Pace, 403 F.3d at 279; Pet. App. 27. The court noted that the State had not disputed that the Spending Clause statute at issue in the case was "enacted in pursuit of the general welfare" and was "sufficiently related to the federal interest in the program funded." 403 F.3d at 280; Pet. App. 30. The court proceeded to consider the other requirements for a valid exercise of congressional power under the Spending Clause.

The court held that the conditions on federal spending in Section 2000d-7 are "unambiguous." 403 F.3d at 282; Pet. App. 34. The court explained that "during the relevant time period, [Section] 2000d-7 * * * put each state on notice that, by accepting federal money, it was waiving its Eleventh Amendment immunity." 403 F.3d at 284; Pet. App. 38. The court rejected the state agencies' attempt to "engraft[] a subjective-intent element onto the otherwise objective Spending Clause waiver inquiry," holding that the fact that a State "might not 'know' subjectively whether it had any immunity [left] to waive by agreeing to th[e] [statutory] conditions is wholly irrelevant." 403 F.3d at 284; Pet. App. 38. The court concluded that, in light of the unambiguous statutory condition, the State's "waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity to actions under § 504 * * * was knowing." 403 F.3d at 285; Pet. App. 39.

The court also held that Section 2000d-7 does not violate any independent constitutional prohibition. The court concluded that the statute does not violate the "unconstitutional-conditions" doctrine, because States as sovereigns, unlike private parties, have the resources to protect their interests and because in any event the need to protect a State from "coercion or compulsion * * * is subsumed in the non-coercion prong of the Dole test." 403 F.3d at 286-287; Pet. App. 41-43. The court also concluded that the conditions in Section 2000d-7 are not unduly coercive. The court noted that, to avoid suit under Section 504, a "state would not have to refuse all federal assistance." 403 F.3d at 287; Pet. App. 43. Instead, "[a] state can prevent suits against a particular agency under § 504 by declining federal funds for that agency." 430 F.3d at 287; Pet. App. 43. The court accordingly "refuse[d] to invalidate Louisiana's waiver on coercion grounds." 430 F.3d at 287; Pet. App. 43.

Judge Jones, joined by five other judges, concurred in part and dissented in part. 403 F.3d at 297-303; Pet. App. 65-76. She agreed with the majority that the Spending Clause statutes at issue in this case are "not unconstitutionally coercive." 403 F.3d at 299 n.2; Pet. App. 68 n.113. But in her view, a State may not be found to have waived its right to sovereign immunity unless it "possess[ed] actual knowledge of the existence of the right or privilege, full understanding of its meaning, and clear comprehension of the consequences of the waiver." 403 F.3d at 300 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); Pet. App. 70 (same). Adopting the reasoning of the panel decision that she had authored, Judge Jones stated her view that a State could reasonably have believed "between 1996 and 1998 that it had no sovereign immunity to waive" because the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), had purported to abrogate its immunity to claims under that statute. 403 F.3d at 301; Pet. App. 71. In her view, although "[t]he State voluntarily accepted federal funds" during that period, the purported abrogation of its immunity to ADA claims meant that "its acceptance [of federal funds] was not a 'knowing' waiver of immunity" to claims under Section 504. 403 F.3d at 301; Pet. App. 71.

This Court recently denied a petition for certiorari filed by Louisiana in Pace. See Louisiana State Bd. of Elementary & Secondary Educ. v. Pace, 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005).

5. The en banc court subsequently issued its decision in Miller (which consisted of three consolidated cases—two from Louisiana and one from Texas) on August 15, 2005, addressing three remaining challenges to the validity of conditioning the receipt of federal funds on a state agency's waiver of immunity to claims under Section 504. Miller v. Texas Tech Univ. Health Scis. Ctr., 421 F.3d 342 (5th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, No. 05-617 (Feb. 21, 2006).

First, the court of appeals rejected the States' contention that they did not waive their immunity to suits under Section 504 because the agencies that accepted the clearly conditioned federal funds were not authorized to waive the States' immunity, though they were authorized to apply for and accept the conditioned funds. 421 F.3d at 347-348; Pet. App. 84-86. The court held that, by authorizing the state agencies to "accept the benefits of substantial sums of federal Spending Clause money burdened with the clearly stated condition under § 2000d-7 that acceptance waives immunity from suit in federal court" for suits under Section 504, the States effectively authorized the agencies to waive their Eleventh Amendment immunity. 421 F.3d at 348; Pet. App. 85.

Second, the court of appeals rejected Texas's challenge to Sections 504 and 2000d-7 on "relatedness" grounds. 421 F.3d at 348-349; Pet. App. 86-89. Texas argued that, because the federal funds its agency received were not funds provided directly under the Rehabilitation Act itself, the conditions in Sections 504 and 2000d-7 are not "reasonably related to the purpose of the expenditure to which they are attached" as required by the Dole test. See 421 F.3d at 348 & n.15; Pet. App. 86 & n.15. The court rejected that contention, holding that Congress's expressed interest in "eliminating disability-based discrimination" in federally-funded programs "flows with every dollar spent by a department or agency receiving federal funds." 421 F.3d at 349; Pet. App. 88-89 (quoting Koslow v. Pennsylvania, 302 F.3d 161, 175-176 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1232 (2003)).

Finally, the court of appeals rejected Louisiana's argument that it did not "knowingly" waive its immunity by accepting federal funds because it might have thought at the time it took the funds that it did not have any immunity to waive. 421 F.3d at 350-352; Pet. App. 89-93. Although the State acknowledged that the same argument had been rejected by the en banc court of appeals in Pace, it argued that this Court's recent decision in Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education, 544 U.S. 167 (2005), required the court to reconsider Pace because this Court in Jackson "repudiated th[e] 'clear statement rule' and replaced it with a 'notice' rule." 421 F.3d at 350-351; Pet. App. 90-91. The court of appeals refused to "read such a sweeping change into th[is] [C]ourt's opinion in Jackson," holding instead that the "clear and unambiguous" waiver condition in Sections 504 and 2000d-7 was sufficient to render a State's acceptance of federal funds a knowing waiver of immunity. 421 F.3d at 351; Pet. App. 92.

Judge Jones, joined by five other judges, concurred in part and dissented in part. Although all the judges agreed with the three holdings of the majority opinion, they filed a separate opinion to reiterate their disagreement with the majority opinion in Pace. 421 F.3d at 352; Pet. App. 94.

Although the Texas state defendants in Miller did not file a petition for certiorari, the Louisiana state defendants in Miller did. Louisiana Dep't of Educ. v. Johnson, No. 05-617. This Court denied the petition on February 21, 2006.

6. On August 25, 2005, a panel of the Fifth Circuit issued an unpublished opinion in the instant case affirming the district court's holding that the state agency defendant is not immune to plaintiff's claims under Section 504. Pet. App. 1-3. The court of appeals stated that all of the challenges to Sections 504 and 2000d-7 had been disposed of by the court's en banc decisions in Pace and Miller. Id. at 3.

ARGUMENT

This Court has rarely raised arguments challenging the constitutionality of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and of 42 U.S.C. 2000d-7 that are indistinguishable from those advanced by petitioner here. See Louisiana Dep't of Educ. v. Johnson, cert. denied, No. 05-617 (Feb. 21, 2006); Louisiana State Bd. of Elementary & Secondary Educ. v. Pace, 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005) (No. 04-1655); WMATA v. Barbour, 125 S. Ct. 1591 (2005) (No. 04-748); Kansas v. Robinson, 539 U.S. 926 (2003) (No. 02-1314); Pennsylvania Dep't of Corrections v. Koslow, 537 U.S. 1232 (2003) (No. 02-801); Hawaii v. Vinson, 537 U.S. 1104 (2003) (No. 01-1878); Chandler v. Lovell, 537 U.S. 1105 (2003) (No. 02-545); Ohio EPIC v. Nihiser, 536 U.S. 922 (2002) (No. 01-1357); Arkansas Dep't of Educ. v. Jim C., 533 U.S. 949 (2001) (No. 00-1488). Just as in those cases, further review is not warranted, and the petition should be denied.

Petitioner does not challenge Congress's authority to condition the receipt of federal funds on a state agency's waiver of its Eleventh Amendment immunity. Nor does petitioner argue that conditioning the receipt of federal funds on a state agency's waiver of its immunity to private claims under Section 504 is somehow unconstitutionally coercive. Rather, petitioner contends that its waiver was invalid because (a) Section 2000d-7(a) does not make it sufficiently clear that Congress intended to make waiver a condition of accepting federal funds, and (b) the condition Congress has placed on the receipt of federal funds is not "related" to the funds, as required under South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203 (1987), to the extent that the condition attaches to funds not distributed under the Rehabilitation Act itself. Those contentions are incorrect and, just as in the cases cited above in which this Court denied certiorari, do not warrant further review here.

1. Knowledge. Petitioner argues (Pet. 14) that it could not have "knowingly" waived its immunity to Section 504 claims, because "[a]lthough Section 2000d-7(a) demonstrates Congress's unmistakable desire that States be subject to suit in federal court, it is less than clear that Congress intended to accomplish that objective indirectly by conditioning waiver on the receipt of federal funds instead of directly by abrogation." Because Congress's intent is clear, that argument was correctly rejected by the court of appeals.

a. Petitioner concedes that Section 2000d-7 makes clear Congress's intent that state agencies accepting federal funds be subject to private suits to enforce Section 504. A State that has chosen to take federal funds under that provision therefore has knowingly waived its immunity. There is no separate requirement that Congress use any particular form of words when it is clear that Congress intended that, if a State takes federal funds, it will be foreclosed from asserting immunity. Every court of appeals to have considered the question has concluded that Section 2000d-7 unambiguously conditions receipt of federal funds on a waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity. See Barbour v. WMATA, 374 F.3d 1161 (D.C. Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 125 S. Ct. 1591 (2005); Nieves-Marquez v. Puerto Rico, 353 F.3d 108 (1st Cir. 2003); Garcia v. SUNY Health Scis. Ctr., 280 F.3d 98, 113-115 (2d Cir. 2001); Koslow v. Pennsylvania, 302 F.3d 161, 172 (3d Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1232 (2003); Litman v. George Mason Univ., 186 F.3d 544, 553-554 (4th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1181 (2000); Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd., 403 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005); Nihiser v. Ohio EPA, 269 F.3d 626, 628 (6th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 922 (2002); Stanley v. Litscher, 213 F.3d 340, 344 (7th Cir. 2000); Jim C. v. United States, 235 F.3d 1079, 1081 (8th Cir. 2000) (en banc), cert. denied, 533 U.S. 949 (2001); Douglas v. California Dep't of Youth Auth., 271 F.3d 812, 820, opinion amended, 271 F.3d 910 (9th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 924 (2002); Robinson v. Kansas, 295 F.3d 1183, 1189-1190 (10th Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 539 U.S. 926 (2003); Sandoval v. Hagan, 197 F.3d 484, 493 (11th Cir. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 532 U.S. 275 (2001).

Petitioner contends (Pet. 18) that “[t]he court of appeals’s decision in Pace widens an existing split between the Second Circuit and every other circuit to consider whether Section 2000d-7(a) can form the basis of a knowing waiver.” Petitioner’s contention is mistaken. The Second Circuit in the case on which petitioner relies, Garcia v. SUNY Health Scis. Ctr., 280 F.3d 98 (2001), stated unequivocally that “we agree with [the plaintiff] that [Section 2000d-7(a)] constitutes a clear expression of Congress’s intent to condition acceptance of federal funds on a state’s waiver of its Eleventh Amendment immunity.” Id. at 113. Accordingly, all of the regional courts of appeals—including the Second Circuit—have agreed that Section 2000d-7(a) puts States on clear notice that agencies that accept federal funds will be subject to suit under Section 504.¹

¹ The Second Circuit in Garcia did disagree with the other circuits on a different point, resulting in the conclusion that the States retained immunity from suit under Section 504 for a period in the 1990s. The court in Garcia reasoned that, because a State may have believed that its immunity from suits for violation of Title II of the ADA was

b. Unlike statutes such as the ADA, which authorizes suits against States by abrogating state sovereign immunity defenses, Section 504 authorizes suits only against state agencies that receive federal funds,² only if the State voluntarily chooses to accept those funds, and only for the duration of the funding period.³ Those abrogated by Section 2000d-7(a), and because the "proscriptions of Title II [of the ADA] and § 504 are virtually identical, a state accepting conditioned federal funds could not have understood that in doing so it was actually abandoning its sovereign immunity from private damages suits [under Section 504], since by all reasonable appearances state sovereign immunity had already been lost [to claims under Title II]."

280 F.3d at 114 (citation omitted). The petition for certiorari does not advance the Garcia rationale or argue that certiorari should be granted to consider whether that rationale is correct. In any event, as the United States explained in its brief in opposition to certiorari in Louisiana State Bd. of Elementary & Secondary Educ. v. Pace, 126 S. Ct. 416 (2005) (No. 04-1655), Garcia was wrong when it was decided, see U.S. Br. in Opp. at 17-21, Pace, supra (No. 04-1655); Garcia has in any event been overtaken by subsequent decisions of this Court in Lapides v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 535 U.S. 613 (2002), and Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509 (2004), see U.S. Br. in Opp. at 21, Pace, supra (No. 04-1655); and even aside from Lapides and Lane, the Garcia rule was a transitional rule and the Second Circuit would now recognize that a State's waiver of immunity from Section 504 suits would be valid for most or all cases currently being litigated and all cases that will arise in the future, see id. at 22-23.

² Section 504 applies only to States that accept federal funds. See 29 U.S.C. 794a(a)(2) (authorizing suits as part of remedies to "any person aggrieved by any act or failure to act by any recipient of Federal assistance  under [Section 504]"') (emphasis added). Accordingly, under any reasonable interpretation of the statutes as a whole, Congress limited its attempted abrogation to those state agencies that receive federal financial assistance.

³ A state agency is not subject to liability and suit under Section 504 in perpetuity if, at any time, it accepted federal funds. Instead, the state program must be "receiving Federal financial assistance" at the differences are critically important. A state agency could read the ADA and conclude that Congress intended to abrogate its sovereign immunity to ADA claims regardless of any decision or action by the State. But Sections 504 and 2000d-7 are clearly conditional. They have effect if, and only if, the agency voluntarily chooses to accept federal funds. If the state agency does not take the funds, no plausible reading of those provisions would subject the agency to suit under Section 504.

Thus, when it was deciding whether to accept federal funds for the relevant funding year, petitioner's sovereign immunity to Section 504 claims for the coming year was intact, and the agency was faced with a clear choice. It could decline federal funds and maintain its sovereign immunity to suits under the Rehabilitation Act, or it could accept funds and be subject to private suits under Section 504. In choosing to accept federal funds that were clearly available only to those state agencies willing to submit to enforcement proceedings in federal court, petitioner knowingly waived its sovereign immunity.

2. Relatedness. Petitioner contends (Pet. 24-30) that Section 504 and Section 2000d-7 are improper exercises of Congress's Spending Clause authority, because the conditions those statutes place on recipients of federal funds are unrelated to the federal interest in the funds insofar as they apply to funds that are not distributed directly under the Rehabilitation Act itself. That contention is incorrect.

a. This Court in South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203 (1987), identified four requirements for valid enactments time of the alleged discrimination leading to the lawsuit. See 29 U.S.C. 794(a).

in exercise of the Spending power. First, the Spending Clause by its terms requires that Congress legislate in pursuit of "the general welfare." Id. at 207. Second, if Congress places conditions on the States' receipt of federal funds, it "must do so unambiguously . . . , enabl[ing] the States to exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation." Ibid. (quoting Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman, 451 U.S. 1, 17 (1981)). Third, this Court's cases "have suggested (without significant elaboration) that conditions on federal grants might be illegitimate if they are unrelated 'to the federal interest in particular national projects or programs.'" Id. at 207 (quoting Massachusetts v. United States, 435 U.S. 444, 461 (1978)). Fourth, the obligations imposed by Congress may not violate any independent constitutional provisions. Id. at 208.

b. Petitioner claims (Pet. 24-30) that Section 504 and Section 2000d-7 fail to meet the third, "relatedness" requirement. Petitioner concedes that the courts of appeals have uniformly concluded that Section 504 and Section 2000d-7 satisfy Dole's relatedness requirement. See Pet. 29 ("There is no circuit split on the question of Section 2000d-7(a) and Dole's relatedness requirement."). Those statutes further the federal interest in ensuring that no federal funds are used to support, directly or indirectly, programs that discriminate or otherwise deny benefits and services on the basis of disability to qualified persons. Cf. Sabri v. United States, 541 U.S. 600, 606 (2004) ("Money is fungible," and it "can be drained off here because a federal grant is pouring in there.").

Section 504's nondiscrimination requirement is patterned on Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq., and Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, 20 U.S.C. 1681 et seq., which prohibit race and sex discrimination by “programs” that receive federal funds. See NCAA v. Smith, 525 U.S. 459, 466 n.3 (1999); School Bd. v. Arline, 480 U.S. 273, 278 n.2 (1987). Both Title VI and Title IX have been upheld as valid Spending Clause legislation. In Lau v. Nichols, 414 U.S. 563 (1974), this Court held that Title VI was a valid exercise of the spending power. “The Federal Government has power to fix the terms on which its money allotments to the States shall be disbursed. Whatever may be the limits of that power, they have not been reached here.” Id. at 569 (citations omitted).⁴ The Court reached a similar conclusion in Grove City College v. Bell, 465 U.S. 555 (1984). In Grove City, the Court addressed whether Title IX, which prohibits education programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance from discriminating on the basis of sex, infringed the college’s First Amendment rights. The Court rejected that claim, holding that “Congress is free to attach reasonable and unambiguous conditions to federal financial assistance that educational institutions are not obligated to accept.” Id. at 575.

Lau and Grove City stand for the proposition that Congress has a legitimate interest in preventing the use of any of its funds to “encourage[], entrench[], subsidize[], or result[] in,” Lau, 414 U.S. at 569 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted), discrimination against persons otherwise qualified on the basis of criteria Congress has determined are irrelevant to the receipt of public services, such as race, gender and disability. Because that interest extends to all federal funds, Congress validly drafted Title VI, Title IX, and Section 504 to apply across the board to all federal financial assistance.⁵

⁴ In Alexander v. Sandoval, 522 U.S. 275, 285 (2001), the Court noted that it has “rejected Lau’s interpretation of § 601 [of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. 2000d] as reaching beyond intentional discrimination.” The Court did not, however, cast doubt on the Spending Clause holding of Lau.

The requirement in Section 2000d-7 that a state funding recipient waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity as a condition of accepting federal financial assistance is also related to the same important federal interests. The United States relies on private litigants to assist in enforcing federal programs and, in particular, in enforcing federal nondiscrimination mandates. The requirement that state funding recipients waive their sovereign immunity to suits under Section 504 as a condition of accepting federal financial assistance both (1) provides a viable enforcement mechanism for individuals who are aggrieved by state funding recipients' failure to live up to the promises they make when they accept federal funds and (2) makes those individuals whole for the injuries they suffer as a result of the funding recipients' failure to follow the law.

⁵ This Court has repeatedly upheld conditions not tied to particular spending programs as valid exercise of Congress's Spending Clause powers. See Boren v. Mergerus, 496 U.S. 226 (1990) (upholding the Equal Access Act, 20 U.S.C. 4071 et seq., which conditions federal financial assistance for those public secondary schools that maintain a "limited open forum" on the schools' not denying "equal access" to students based on the content of their speech); Oklahoma v. United States Civil Service Commission, 330 U.S. 127, 144 (1947) (upholding an across-the-board requirement in the Hatch Act that no state employee whose principal employment was in connection with any activity that was financed in whole or in part by the United States could take "any active part in political management") (citation omitted).

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.
Respectfully submitted.

PAUL D. CLEMENT

Solicitor General

WAN J. KIM

Assistant Attorney General

JESSICA DUNSMAY SILVER

SARAH E. HARRINGTON

Attorneys

FEBRUARY 2006

2 Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED

05-671 NOV 22 2005

No. OFFICE OF THE CLERK

In the
Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Petitioner.

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA,
Respondent.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

APPENDIX

GREG ABBOTT Attorney General of Texas	R. TED CRUZ Solicitor General Counsel of Record
BARRY R. MCBEE First Assistant Attorney General	RANCE L. CRAFT Assistant Solicitor General
EDWARD D. BURBACH Deputy Attorney General for Litigation	AMY WARR Assistant Solicitor General
	P.O. Box 12548 Austin, Texas 78711 (512) 936-1700

No. _____

In the
Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Petitioner.

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA,
Respondent.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

APPENDIX

GREG ABBOTT
Attorney General of Texas

BARRY R. McBEE
First Assistant Attorney
General

EDWARD D. BURBACH
Deputy Attorney General
for Litigation

R. TED CRUZ
Solicitor General
Counsel of Record

RANCE L. CRAFT
Assistant Solicitor General

AMY WARR
Assistant Solicitor General

P.O. Box 12548
Austin, Texas 78711
(512) 936-1700

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Espinoza v. Texas Department of Public Safety, No. 02-11168, 2005 WL 2044547 (CA5 Aug. 25, 2005) (per curiam)	1
Memorandum Opinion and Order of the District Court Denying the Department's Motion to Dismiss	4
Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board, 403 F.3d 272 (CA5 2005) (en banc)	17
Miller v. Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center , 421 F.3d 342 (CA5 2005) (en banc)	77

United States Court of Appeals
Fifth Circuit
FILED
August 25, 2005
Charles R. Fulbruge III
Clerk

In the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

No. 02-11168
Summary Calendar

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA,
Plaintiff-Appellee,
VERSUS
TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY; ET AL.,
Defendants,
TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Defendant-Appellant.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas

Nº 3:00-CV-1975-L

Before DAVIS, SMITH, and DENNIS, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM: *

Julie Espinoza sued the Texas Department of Public Safety ("TDPS") for alleged violations of title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA"), 42 U.S.C. § 12132, and § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. § 794(a). Based on intervening decisions from the Supreme Court and this court,¹ Espinoza conceded that her ADA claim was barred by sovereign immunity² but maintained that her § 504 Rehabilitation Act claim for injunctive relief was not.

TDPS moved the district court to dismiss the § 504 claim on the basis of state sovereign immunity. Concluding that TDPS had waived its immunity from suit under § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act by accepting federal funds pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 2000d-7, the district court denied the motion to dismiss, and TDPS took this interlocutory appeal.

* Pursuant to 5TH CIR. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5TH CIR. R. 47.5.4.

1. See Board of Trustees of Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356 (2001) (holding that title I of the ADA did not validly abrogate state sovereign immunity pursuant to Section Five of the Fourteenth Amendment); Reickenbacker v. Foster, 274 F.3d 974 (5th Cir. 2001) (holding that title II of the ADA and § 504 the Rehabilitation Act, which offer protections almost identical to those of the ADA, did not validly abrogate state sovereign immunity pursuant to Section Five of the Fourteenth Amendment).

2. Thereafter, on leave from the district court, Espinoza amended her complaint to assert an ADA claim against the director of the TDPS in his official capacity under Ex Parte Young, 209 U.S. 123 (1908), for which she sought prospective injunctive relief and attorney's fees. No challenge to this claim is presently before us.

During the pendency of this appeal, we decided Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd., 403 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005) (en banc), which, as TDPS has appropriately acknowledged in supplemental briefing, forecloses all but two of its arguments for reversing the denial of sovereign immunity: (1) that despite accepting federal funds conditioned on a waiver of immunity, it does not have authority, as a matter of state law, to waive immunity from suit in federal court; and (2) that §§ 504 and 2000d-7 fail the relatedness requirement set forth in South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203 (1987). Although not addressed in Pace, those contentions are now foreclosed by in Miller v. Tex. Tech Univ. Health Scis. Ctr., 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 17244 (5th Cir. Aug. 15, 2005) (en banc).

Therefore, based on these precedents, we AFFIRM the denial of TDPS's motion to dismiss on the basis of state sovereign immunity, and we REMAND this matter for further proceedings.

U.S. DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
FILED
SEP 30 2002
CLERK, U.S. DISTRICT COURT
By: _____ /s/
Deputy

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA,	§
	§
Plaintiff,	§
	§
v.	§ Civil Action No.
	§ 3:00-CV-1975-L
	§
TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF	§
PUBLIC SAFETY,	§	ENTERED
	§ OCT 1 2002
Defendant.	§ U.S.D.C.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

Before the court is Defendant's Motion to Dismiss, filed November 15, 2001; Plaintiff's First Motion to Amend Complaint and Join Additional Party, filed December 5, 2001; and Plaintiffs Motion to Substitute Amended Complaint, filed February 11, 2002. After careful consideration of the parties' motions, responses, Plaintiffs complaint, and the applicable law, the court denies Defendant's Motion to Dismiss and grants Plaintiffs Motion to Substitute Amended Complaint.

I. Factual and Procedural Background

Because of a childhood disease, Plaintiff Julie Dunlop Espinoza ("Espinoza") has a physical condition that requires her to walk with crutches or use a scooter for mobility. In May of 2000, Espinoza attempted to renew her drivers license at the Department of Public Safety ("DPS") office located in Mesquite, Texas where a DPS clerk observed Espinoza and later filed a report, stating that Espinoza had a condition, which might make her an unsafe driver. Based on this report, DPS told Espinoza she would have to take a comprehensive examination to demonstrate her driving ability in order to renew her license.

On September 8, 2000, Espinoza filed this action against DPS, alleging that DPS' process for renewing drivers licenses discriminated against persons with disabilities. Specifically, Espinoza claims that DPS' requirement that she submit to a comprehensive examination to demonstrate her qualifications as a driver in order to renew her drivers license violated Title II¹ of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA"), 42 U.S.C.A. § 12101, et seq. (1995) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 794-794a (1999). In her original complaint, Espinoza sought a temporary and permanent injunction, declaratory relief, damages, and attorney's fees.

1. The ADA forbids discrimination against disabled individuals in major areas of public life, among them employment (Title I of the Act), 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111-12117 (1995), and public services (Title II), §§ 12131-12165. At issue in this case is whether Eleventh Amendment immunity bars Title II suits under the ADA.

In November of 2001, DPS filed a motion to amend its answer to add the defense of sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment and moved to dismiss the action in light of the United States Supreme Court's holding in Board of Trustees of the University of Alabama v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356 (2001) that suits brought against state agencies pursuant to Title I of the ADA were barred by Eleventh Amendment immunity.² Shortly thereafter Espinoza filed two motions to amend her complaint. The parties then filed a joint motion to stay the proceedings to permit the parties to file briefs addressing DPS' motion to dismiss on the basis of sovereign immunity and Espinoza's motion to amend her complaint. The court granted the motion, staying the proceedings until a period of thirty days after the court ruled on the parties' motions.

II. Motion to Dismiss Standard

A. Rule 12(b)(1) Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A motion to dismiss filed under Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure challenges the subject matter jurisdiction of a federal district court. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1). A claim is properly dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction when the court lacks the statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate the claim. See Home Builders Assoc., Inc. v. City of Madison, 143 F.3d 1006, 1010 (5th Cir. 1998). Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, and absent jurisdiction conferred by statute, they lack the power to adjudicate claims. See e.g., Stockman v. Federal Election Comm'n, 138 F.3d 144, 151 (5th Cir. 1998) (citing Veldhoen v. United States Coast Guard, 35 F.3d 222, 225 (5th Cir. 1994)). Thus, a federal court must dismiss an action whenever it appears that subject matter jurisdiction is lacking. Stockman, 138 F.3d at 151.

2. The Court did not decide whether Title II suits under the ADA were also barred by Eleventh Amendment immunity. Garrett, 531 U.S. at 358 n.1.

In considering a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, "a court may evaluate (1) the complaint alone, (2) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts evidenced in the record, or (3) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts plus the court's resolution of disputed facts." Den Norske Stats Oljeselskap As v. HeereMac Vof, 241 F.3d 420, 424 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 122 S.Ct. 1059 (2002). Thus, unlike a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the district court is entitled to consider disputed facts as well as undisputed facts in the record. See Clark v. Tarrant County, 798 F.2d 736, 741 (5th Cir. 1986). Uncontroverted allegations of the complaint, however, must be accepted as true. Den Norske Stats Oljeselskap As, 241 F.3d at 424.

B. Rule 12(b)(6) Failure to State a Claim

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) "is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted." Lowrey v. Texas A&M Univ. Sys., 117 F.3d 242, 247 (5th Cir. 1997). A district court cannot dismiss a complaint, or any part of it, for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957); Blackburn v. City of Marshall, 42 F.3d 925, 931 (5th Cir. 1995). Stated another way, "[a] court may dismiss a complaint only if it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations." Swierkiewicz v. Sorema, 122 S.Ct. 992, 998 (2002) (quoting Hishon v. King & Spalding, 467 U.S. 69, 73 (1984)).

In reviewing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the court must accept all well-pleaded facts in the complaint as true and view them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Baker v. Putnal, 75 F.3d 190, 196 (5th Cir. 1996). In ruling on such a motion, the court cannot look beyond the pleadings. Id.; Spivey v. Robertson, 197 F.3d 772, 774 (5th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1229 (2000). The ultimate question in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is whether the complaint states a valid cause of action when it is viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and with every doubt resolved in favor of the plaintiff. Lowrey, 117 F.3d at 247. A plaintiff, however, must plead specific facts, not mere conclusory allegations, to avoid dismissal. Guidry v. Bank of LaPlace, 954 F.2d 278, 281 (5th Cir. 1992).

III. Analysis

Since the Garrett decision, the Fifth Circuit in Reickenbacker v. M.J. Foster, 274 F.3d 974, 976 (5th Cir. 2001), determined that claims against the State under Title II of the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act are also barred by immunity, based on the same reasoning and analysis applied in Garrett. Reickenbacker, 274 F.3d at 983-84. In light of the Fifth Circuit's holding in Reickenbacker, DPS contends that Espinoza's discrimination claims against DPS, a state agency, under Title II of the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act are barred by Eleventh Amendment immunity. DPS therefore argues that Espinoza's claims should be dismissed.

A. Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

Espinoza alleges in her original complaint that DPS "is an agency of the State of Texas that conducts programs or activities receiving Federal financial assistance as defined by the Rehabilitation Act...." She therefore argues that because DPS accepted federal funds it waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity defense under the Rehabilitation Act. In response, DPS contends that Espinoza's argument that DPS' receipt of federal funds waives Eleventh Amendment immunity was rejected by the United States Supreme Court in Seminole Tribe v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44 (1996). DPS therefore argues that the "mere receipt of federal funds cannot establish that a state has consented to suit in federal court." Id. at 59 (quoting Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon, 473 U.S.234, 246-247 (1985)). The court disagrees.

As noted above, the Court's statement that the receipt of federal funds does not alone establish a state's consent to be sued in federal court is a quote from Atascadero State Hospital. In Atascadero, the Court held that Congress had not unequivocally waived states' sovereign immunity in the Rehabilitation Act. Id. at 235. In response to the Supreme Court's decision in Atascadero State Hospital, however, Congress amended the Rehabilitation Act by enacting the "equalization" provision, codified at 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7, which "craft[ed] an unambiguous waiver of the States Eleventh Amendment immunity." Lane v. Pena, 518 U.S. 187, 199 (1996). That section provides in pertinent part:

A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 [29 U.S.C.A. § 794] . . . the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 [42 U.S.C.A. § 6101], . . . or the provisions of any other Federal statute prohibiting discrimination by recipients of Federal financial assistance.

42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7 (1994).

While the Fifth Circuit in Reickenbacker declined to address the issue of whether receipt of federal funds waives state sovereign immunity,³ it noted that the Supreme Court in Lane held that 42

3. In Reickenbacker, the Fifth Circuit explicitly declined to consider plaintiffs' argument that Louisiana had waived its immunity under the Rehabilitation Act when it accepted federal funds, because plaintiffs had failed to raise the issue in the district court. Reickenbacker, 274 F.3d at 984.

U.S.C. § 2000d-7 created a waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity with respect to those statutes listed in Section 2000d-7. Reickenbacker, 274 F.3d at 984 n.73. Therefore, Lane still reflects the current law in this circuit until the Fifth Circuit addresses the issue. Assuming Espinoza's allegation that DPS receives federal funds is true, as the court must when considering a motion to dismiss, then DPS waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity from claims for money damages or injunctive relief under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act by accepting federal funds.⁴

B. Title II of the ADA

Espinoza acknowledges that her ADA claim against DPS is barred by immunity but requests that she be allowed to amend her complaint to meet the *Ex Parte Young*⁵ exception allowing suits against state officials for alleged violations of federal law. "To meet the Ex parte Young exception, a plaintiff's suit alleging a federal law violation must be brought against individual persons in their official capacities as agents of the state, and the relief sought must be declaratory or injunctive in nature and prospective in effect." Aguilar v. Texas Dep't of Criminal Justice, 160 F.3d 1052, 1054 (5th Cir. 1998). Accordingly, Espinoza requests she be allowed to amend her complaint to join the current director of DPS, Tommy Davis, in his official capacity and to strike her request for monetary damages, leaving only her request for prospective

4. Since Reickenbacker, two other district courts have addressed applying the holding of Reickenbacker to a Rehabilitation Act claim and have held similarly that receipt of federal funds waives sovereign immunity. See August v. Mitchell, 205 F. Supp.2d 558, 561 (E.D. La. 2002); Johnson v. Louisiana, No. 01-2002, 2002 W. 33645, *5 (RD. La. Jan.18, 2002). The court finds the reasoning set forth in these cases persuasive.

5. Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123 (1908).

injunctive relief and attorney's fees.⁶ In response, DPS urges the court to not grant Espinoza's motions to amend, because they were filed after the March 12, 2001 deadline in the court's scheduling order. The court again disagrees.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15(a) provides that leave to amend a pleading "shall be freely given when justice so requires." Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a). The federal rules permit liberal pleading and amendment to facilitate adjudication of the merits by avoiding excessive formalism. See Lowrey v. Texas A & M Univ., 117 F.3d 242, 245 (5th Cir. 1997). The decision whether to grant leave lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Louisiana v. Litton Mortgage Co., 50 F.3d 1298, 1302-03 (5th Cir. 1995). Leave to amend should be given in the absence of "undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of the movant, repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to the opposing party, or futility of amendment." In re Southmark Corp., 88 F.3d 311, 314 (5th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1057 (1997).

On December 12, 2000, the court entered a scheduling order requiring the parties to file all motions to amend and motions to join additional parties by no later than March 12, 2001. On November 14, 2001, DPS moved to amend its answer to include the defense of immunity. On December 5, 2001, Espinoza filed her First Motion to Amend Complaint, Join Additional Party, and Brief in Support. On February 11, 2002, she filed a Motion to Substitute Amended Complaint to substitute Tommy Davis, the current DPS director, for Dudley Thomas, the former director of DPS listed in Espinoza's first motion to amend. All of these motions, including

6. Espinoza's motion includes additional amendments, but they are not relevant to the court's analysis of this issue.

DPS', were filed after the court's March 12, 2001 deadline; however, the deadlines for discovery and all other proceedings set forth in the court's scheduling order were stayed by the court's order of December 20, 2001 by request of the parties. Thus, DPS' argument that Espinoza's motions were untimely is without merit.

Moreover, the court finds it inconsistent with fair play for DPS to seek denial of Espinoza's motion to amend for "untimeliness" when the court allowed it to amend well past the deadline for amendment of pleadings. Although DPS opposes Espinoza's proposed amendments, it has failed to demonstrate how the amendment would unduly prejudice its case or how any delay was either undue or in bad faith. Espinoza, on the other hand, contends that the amendments in no way change or add to the relief sought, require no additional discovery, and will not require extension of the court's scheduling deadlines. The court agrees.

Absent evidence of bad faith, prejudice or undue delay, and in light of the liberal amendment policies of the federal rules, the court must grant Espinoza's motions to amend her complaint unless it can be shown that the proposed amendments are a futility. The court therefore considers DPS' arguments that Espinoza should not be allowed to amend her complaint because even with the proposed amendments, she cannot meet the Ex Parte Young exception to its Eleventh Amendment immunity for the following reasons: (1) her remedies for damages and attorney's fees exceed the prospective injunctive relief allowed by Ex Parte Young; (2) she failed to allege no state forum is available; (3) the injunctive relief requested is inappropriate because it involves a "special sovereignty interest" of the State; and (4) the Fifth Circuit does not recognize the "deliberate indifference" standard alleged.

1. Remedies for Damages and Attorney's Fees

DPS first contends that only injunctive relief is permitted under Ex Parte Young and that Espinoza's request for monetary damages and attorney's fees therefore exceeds the relief allowable. The court disagrees. Espinoza's amended complaint excluded money damages and, contrary to DPS' assertion, the United States Supreme Court has held that attorney's fees are not subject to the Eleventh Amendment's constraints on actions for damages because they constitute "reimbursement of 'expenses incurred in litigation seeking only prospective relief,' rather than 'retroactive liability for prelitigation conduct.'" Missouri v. Jenkins by Agyei, 491 U.S. 274, 278 (1989) (quoting Hutto v. Finney, 437 U.S. 678, 695 (1979)).

2. Failure to Allege Unavailability of State Forum

DPS next cites Idaho v. Coeur d'Alene Tribe, 521 U.S. 261 (1997), arguing that Espinoza failed to allege that no state forum was available to vindicate her federal interests. DPS further maintains that there is a state forum in which Espinoza could bring her claim the Texas Commission on Human Rights Act. As Espinoza notes, however, the Court's opinion in Idaho v. Coeur d'Alene Tribe was a plurality opinion in which Justice Kennedy was joined only by Chief Justice Rehnquist. A majority of the Court in Justice O'Connor's concurring opinion expressly disapproved of the unavailability of a state forum prerequisite, because it constituted a marked departure from the Court's early Young cases. Id. at 292 (O'Connor, J., concurring, joined by Scalia and Thomas, J.J.) ("Not only do our early Young cases fail to rely on the absence of a state forum as a basis for jurisdiction, but we also permitted federal actions to proceed even though a state forum was open to hear the plaintiff's claims."). Moreover, the Texas Commission on Human Rights Act deals with employment discrimination, which is not the basis of Espinoza's claim. See Tex. Labor Code Ann. § 21.001 (Vernon 1996).

3. Special Sovereignty Interest

DPS contends that the Ex Parte Young exception is never appropriate where, as here, the injunctive relief sought interferes with a state's "special sovereignty interest." Specifically, DPS argues that under Texas state law, it is vested with the power and authority to issue drivers licenses to "qualifying applicants" and it has a "special sovereignty interest" in regulating drivers license procedures. DPS therefore contends that it would be inappropriate for the court to grant Espinoza's injunctive relief; that is, for the court to determine who are "qualified" drivers in the State of Texas, or what testing facilities and procedures should be employed by DPS to make that determination. In response, Espinoza argues that DPS' characterization of her suit and the relief sought is incorrect. According to Espinoza, she only requests that DPS be ordered or required to follow its written regulations and enjoined from treating persons with disabilities in a discriminatory manner when renewing drivers licenses. The court agrees that Espinoza's complaint as amended seeks prospective injunctive relief as contemplated by Ex Parte Young to address an ongoing violation of federal law by prohibiting further discriminatory action. Verizon Maryland, Inc. v. Public Serv. Comm'n, 122 S.Ct. 1753, 1760 (2002) ("In determining whether the doctrine of Ex Parte Young avoids an Eleventh Amendment bar to suit, a court need only conduct a 'straightforward inquiry into whether [the] complaint alleges an ongoing violation of federal law and seeks relief properly characterized as prospective.'") (quoting Coeur d'Alene Tribe of Idaho, 521 U.S. at 296).

4. Deliberate Indifference Standard

Finally, DPS argues that that the Fifth Circuit does not recognize the "deliberate indifference" standard Espinoza alleged in her complaint. Espinoza does not allege a claim under this standard in her amended complaint. The court therefore need not address the issue. For the reasons set forth herein, the court cannot say the amendment of Espinoza's complaint would be futile. Accordingly, denying her leave to amend on this ground would be inconsistent with Rule 15(a) and an abuse of the court's discretion.

IV. Conclusion

The court concludes that DPS' acceptance of federal funds, waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. Accordingly, DPS' motion to dismiss Espinoza's claims against DPS under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act is denied and Defendant's Motion to Dismiss Espinoza's claims against DPS under Title II of the ADA is denied as moot.

Having found no evidence of undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of Espinoza, repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to DPS, or futility of amendment, the court grants Plaintiff's Motion to Substitute Amended Complaint and denies Plaintiff's First Motion to Amend Complaint and Join Additional Party as moot. Plaintiff shall file an original copy of Plaintiff's Substituted Amended Complaint within ten days of this order and Plaintiff's Original Complaint is hereby withdrawn once Plaintiff files her Substituted Amended Complaint, which will take the place of the withdrawn complaint.

In light of the court's ruling in this matter, the court's order of December 4, 2001, staying all proceedings is lifted. Counsel for the parties shall confer and submit a joint status report with respect to the following: (a) time needed for additional discovery; (b) a trial date and estimated length of trial; (c) prospects for settlement, whether some type of Alternative Dispute Resolution is appropriate, and, if so, when it should take place; and (d) any other matter that would aid the disposition of this matter. The joint status report shall be submitted by no later than October 16, 2002.

It is so ordered this /s/ 30th day of September, 2002.

/s/ Sam A. Lindsay

Sam A. Lindsay
United States District Judge

United States Court of Appeals
Fifth Circuit
FILED
March 8, 2005

Charles R. Fulbruge III
Clerk

REVISED MARCH 16, 2005
UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
For the Fifth Circuit

No. 01-31026

TRAVIS PACE,

Plaintiff-Appellant,

VERSUS

THE BOGALUSA CITY SCHOOL BOARD, LOUISIANA
STATE BOARD OF ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION, THE LOUISIANA DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, and THE STATE OF LOUISIANA,

Defendants-Appellees.

Appeal from the United States District Court
For the Eastern District of Louisiana

Before KING, C^t of Judge, JOLLY, HIGGINBOTHAM, DAVIS, JONES, SMITH, WIENER, BARKSDALE, GARZA, DeMOSS, BENAVIDES, STEWART, DENNIS and PRADO, Circuit Judges.¹

DAVIS and WIENER, Circuit Judges:

Travis Pace (Pace) appeals the district court's dismissal of his claim under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and the district court's order granting summary judgment in favor of defendants on Pace's claims under Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA or Title II) and § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (§ 504). The panel of this court which considered Pace's appeal concluded that the State of Louisiana, the Louisiana Department of Education and the Louisiana State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education (State Defendants) were entitled to sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment from all of Pace's claims. The panel then affirmed the district court's dismissal of Pace's claims against the Bogalusa City School Board. We took this case en banc, first to consider whether the state defendants were entitled to immunity from Pace's claims under the Eleventh Amendment and, second, to consider the merits of Pace's claims under the IDEA, ADA and § 504. For the reasons discussed below, we now conclude that the State waived its right to immunity under the Eleventh Amendment and therefore the State defendants are not entitled to immunity from Pace's § 504 and IDEA claims. On the merits, we conclude that the district court did not err in dismissing Pace's IDEA claims and that the district court correctly concluded that the dismissal of Pace's IDEA claims precluded his accessibility claims under the ADA and § 504. We reject Pace's argument that because different legal standards control his accessibility claims under ADA/504, those claims were not

1. Judge Clement recused herself and did not participate in this decision.

litigated in his IDEA action. A 1997 amendment and implementing regulations to the IDEA expressly require schools to comply with the identical standards for new construction that ADA/504 and their regulations require.

I. FACTUAL AND LEGAL BACKGROUND

The factual and procedural background of this case is accurately and succinctly presented in the panel opinion:

In 1994, at the age of fifteen, Travis Pace (Pace) was enrolled at Bogalusa High School. He is developmentally delayed, confined to a wheelchair, and suffers from cerebral palsy and bladder incontinence. In July 1997, Pace's mother requested a due process hearing under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), 20 U.S.C. § 1400, et seq., as she believed that Pace was denied a "free appropriate public education" (FAPE) due to a lack of handicap accessible facilities at Bogalusa High School and deficiencies in Pace's "individualized education programs" (IEPs). The hearing officer found that the Bogalusa City Schools System² provided Pace with a FAPE in compliance with the IDEA, and the State Level Review Panel (SLRP) affirmed the hearing officer's decision.

In September 1997, Pace filed a complaint with the Office for Civil Rights of the Department of Education (OCR), alleging violations of § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (§ 504), 29 U.S.C. § 794(a), and Title II of the

2. The hearing examiner made hearings with regard to the Bogalusa City Schools System. In federal court, Pace brought suit against the Bogalusa City School Board. For all practical purposes, these two entities are the same and will be referred to as "BCSB."

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), 42 U.S.C. § 12132. The OCR and BCSB resolved allegations that the BCSB operated services, programs, and activities that were physically inaccessible to or unusable by individuals with disabilities by entering into a voluntary written agreement under which the BCSB would identify accessibility barriers and the OCR would oversee the development of a compliance plan.

In March 1999, Pace filed suit in federal district court, seeking damages and injunctive relief against the BCSB, the Louisiana State Board of Elementary and Secondary Education, the Louisiana Department of Education, and the State of Louisiana, alleging violations of the IDEA, the ADA, § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and various state statutes.³ The district court bifurcated Pace's IDEA and non-IDEA claims. In separate orders, it affirmed the SLP decision by dismissing Pace's IDEA claims, then granted the defendants' motions for summary judgment on Pace's non-IDEA claims. Pace appeals both decisions.

II. STATE IMMUNITY UNDER THE ELEVENTH AMENDMENT

We consider first the defendants' arguments that they are entitled to sovereign immunity from Pace's claims under the Eleventh Amendment. At the core of this Eleventh Amendment

3. We do not consider Pace's § 1983 claim and state law claims because he did not brief them on appeal. L & A Contracting Co. v. S. Concrete Servs., Inc., 17 F.3d 106, 113 (5th Cir. 1994); F.R.A.P. 28(a)(9)(A).

dispute is the question whether, when Louisiana accepted particular federal funds, it waived the immunity afforded it by the Eleventh Amendment to suits under § 504 and the IDEA.⁴

A. THE TEXT AND FUNCTION OF THE ELEVENTH AMENDMENT

We start, as always, with the text. The Eleventh Amendment states:

The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State.⁵

These forty-three words—adopted in swift response to the Supreme Court's holding in Chisholm v. Georgia⁶ that Article III permitted a state to be sued in federal court⁷ — protect states from such

4. The waiver argument does not apply to Title II because the ADA does not condition the receipt of federal funds on compliance with the Act or waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity. Rather, Title II applies to public entities regardless of whether they receive federal funds. See 42 U.S.C. § 12132.

5. U.S. CONST. amend. XI.

6. 2 U.S. (2 Dall.) 419 (1793).

7. See United States ex rel. Foulds v. Texas Tech Univ., 171 F.3d 279, 286 n.9 (5th Cir. 1999) ("The Supreme Court's interpretation of Article III powers in Chisholm, prompted Congress' 'outraged reversal' of that decision through enactment of the Eleventh Amendment.") (citing DAVID P. CURRIE, THE CONSTITUTION IN THE SUPREME COURT: THE FIRST HUNDRED YEARS 99 (1985)).

litigation.⁸ The protection thus afforded, however, has long since been expanded beyond the plain text of the Amendment. "Though its precise terms bar only federal jurisdiction over suits brought against one State by citizens of another State or foreign state," the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Amendment has "recognized that the Eleventh Amendment accomplished much more."⁹ The immunity afforded to states under the Eleventh Amendment "implicates the fundamental constitutional balance between the Federal Government and the States."¹⁰ Therefore, at its core, the Eleventh Amendment serves "as an essential component of our constitutional structure."¹¹

Nevertheless, Eleventh Amendment immunity is not absolute. A number of different circumstances may lead to a state's litigating in federal court absent Eleventh Amendment immunity. We begin with an overview of the Court's current framework for assessing when a suit against a state may proceed in federal court.

B. EXCEPTIONS TO ELEVENTH AMENDMENT IMMUNITY

There are two fundamental exceptions to the general rule that bars an action in federal court filed by an individual against a state. First, a state's Eleventh Amendment immunity may be abrogated when Congress acts under § 5, the Enforcement Clause of the

8. For present purposes, we ignore any role the Eleventh Amendment plays in regulating whether states may be sued in state courts.

9. College Savings Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Education Expense Bd., 527 U.S. 666, 669 (1999).

10. Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234, 238 (1985).

11. Dellmuth v. Muth, 491 U.S. 223, 228 (1989).

Fourteenth Amendment.¹² Second, a state may consent to suit in federal court.¹³

1. Abrogation under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment

Congress can single-handedly strip the states of their Eleventh Amendment immunity and thereby authorize federal court suits by individuals against the states. When Congress does this, it is exercising its power to abrogate Eleventh Amendment immunity. In Reickenbacker v. Foster,¹⁴ we examined the Supreme Court's cases concerning congressional abrogation of Eleventh Amendment immunity under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment and derived the following test for determining whether a federal statute is a valid exercise of Congress's power to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment and, consequently, whether the statute abrogates Eleventh Amendment immunity: (1) The statute must contain an unequivocal statement of congressional intent to abrogate; (2) Congress must have identified a history and pattern of 12. U.S. CONST. amend. XIV, § 5 ("The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.").

13. The term "abrogation" is not synonymous with "consent" or "waiver." When a state consents to suit or waives its Eleventh Amendment immunity, it knowingly and voluntarily forfeits the immunity's protections. In contrast, when Congress acts under its Fourteenth Amendment power to abrogate, the state has no choice.

14. 274 F.3d 974 (5th Cir. 2001). The continuing validity of Reickenbacker following the Supreme Court's decision in Tennessee v. Lane, 124 S. Ct. 1978 (2004), is uncertain. At the very least, its holding has been overruled as to Title II claims implicating a person's fundamental right of access to the courts. In addition, after Lane we do not look solely at the state level for a history and pattern of unconstitutional action; we also examine discrimination by nonstate government entities. Lane, 124 S. Ct. at 1991 n.16.

unconstitutional action by the states; and (3) the rights and remedies created by the statute must be congruent and proportional to the constitutional violation(s) Congress sought to remedy or prevent.¹⁵ If these three requirements are satisfied, states are subject to federal jurisdiction in suits under the statute adopted pursuant to § 5, regardless of any absence of consent.

2. Waiver of Immunity by Consent

Either in the absence of § 5 abrogation or in addition to it, a state always has the prerogative of foregoing its protection from federal court jurisdiction under the Eleventh Amendment.¹⁶ A state's consent to suit must be both knowing and voluntary. That consent must always be "knowing and voluntary" follows from College Savings Bank, in which the Supreme Court cited Johnson v. Zerbst, to define what constitutes effective waiver.¹⁷ Waiver is effective when it is the "intentional relinquishment or abandonment of a known right or privilege."¹⁸ The first part, "intentional relinquishment," captures the principle of voluntariness; and the

15. Id. at 977, 981-83

16. College Savings Bank, 527 U.S. at 670; Idaho v. Coeur d'Alene Tribe of Idaho, 521 U.S. 261, 267 (1997) ("[A] State can waive its Eleventh Amendment protection and allow a federal court to hear and decide a case commenced or prosecuted against it."); Great N. Life Ins. Co. v. Read, 322 U.S. 47, 54 (1944) ("The immunity may, of course, be waived."); Clark v. Barnard, 108 U.S. 436, 447 (1883) ("The immunity from suit belonging to a State, which is respected and protected by the Constitution within the limits of the judicial power of the United States, is a personal privilege which it may waive at pleasure.").

17. 527 U.S. at 682 (citing Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 464 (1938)).

18. Id. (quoting Zerbst, 304 U.S. at 464)

second part, "known right or privilege," captures the element of knowingness.

When Congress conditions the availability of federal funds on a state's waiver of its Eleventh Amendment immunity, we employ a five-prong test derived from the Supreme Court's definitive spending power case, South Dakota v. Dole,¹⁹ to ascertain the validity of the waiver. In Dole, South Dakota challenged a congressional statute that conditions the states' receipt of federal highway funds on their adoption of the minimum drinking age of twenty-one. South Dakota argued that the statute exceeded Congress's spending power and violated the Twenty-First Amendment.²⁰ The Court rejected this argument, noting that even though Congress is prohibited by the Twenty-First Amendment from directly regulating the distribution of alcoholic beverages, the Spending Clause authorizes it indirectly to entice states to raise their drinking age by dangling the proverbial carrot of federal dollars.²¹

Dole embodies an expansive interpretation of Congress's spending authority. Indirect persuasion is constitutional, reasoned the Court, because the spending power "is not limited by the direct grants of legislative power found in the Constitution.²² Congress can, therefore, validly use its spending power to legislate conditions on the disbursement of federal funds even though those conditions would be unconstitutional if enacted as direct prohibitions.²³ It goes without saying that, because states have the independent power to lay and collect taxes, they retain the ability to avoid the imposition of unwanted federal regulation simply by rejecting federal funds.

19. 483 U.S. 203 (1987).

20. Id. at 205.

21. Id. at 206. See also New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 161-69 (1992) (holding that although the Tenth Amendment prevents Congress from directly commandeering state officials into regulating radioactive waste, Congress can "hold out incentives to the States as a method of influencing a State's policy choices").

Nevertheless, Congress's power to effect policy through the exercise of its spending power is not unlimited. Dole announced the restrictions that control such exercise: (1) Federal expenditures must benefit the general welfare; (2) The conditions imposed on the recipients must be unambiguous; (3) The conditions must be reasonably related to the purpose of the expenditure; and (4) No condition may violate any independent constitutional prohibition.²⁴ In addition, the Dole Court recognized a fifth requirement that the condition not be coercive: "[I]n some circumstances the financial 22. Dole, 483 U.S. at 207 (quoting United States v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1, 66 (1936)). See also United States v. Lipscomb, 299 F.3d 303, 319 (5th Cir. 2002) ("Congress's spending power, like its power to tax, is 'to provide for the general welfare,' and is therefore untrammeled by the specific grants of legislative power found elsewhere in Article I, Section 8.") (citation omitted).

23. See Dole, 483 U.S. at 206-07; United States v. Am. Library Ass'n, Inc., 539 U.S. 194, 203 (2003) ("Congress has wide latitude to attach conditions to the receipt of federal assistance in order to further its policy objectives.").

24. Id. at 207-08. See also New York, 505 U.S. at 171-72.

inducement offered by Congress might be so coercive as to pass the point at which 'pressure turns into compulsion.'"²⁵

Thus, Dole makes clear that, as long as its framework is employed, congressional spending programs that are enacted in pursuit of the general welfare and unambiguously condition a state's acceptance of federal funds on reasonably related requirements are constitutional unless they are either (1) independently prohibited or (2) coercive. When the condition requires a state to waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity, Dole's requirement of an unambiguous statement of the condition and its proscription on coercive inducements serve a dual role because they ensure compliance with College Savings Bank's requirement that waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity must be (a) knowing and (b) voluntary.

i. Clear Statement: "Knowing"

In Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman,²⁶ the Court analyzed Congress's power to impose conditions on a state's receipt of federal funds and pronounced:

There can, of course, be no knowing acceptance if a State is unaware of the conditions or is unable to ascertain what is expected of it. Accordingly, if Congress intends to impose a condition on the grant of federal moneys, it must do so unambiguously.... By insisting that Congress speak with a clear voice, we enable the States to exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation.²⁷

25. 483 U.S. at 211 (quoting Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, 301 U.S. 548, 590 (1937)).

26. 451 U.S. 1 (1981).

27. Id. at 17 (emphasis added) (citations omitted).

Thus, we know that this stringent clear-statement rule ensures that when a state foregoes its Eleventh Amendment immunity in exchange for federal funds, it does so "knowingly."²⁸ In our reading of Pennhurst, the only "knowledge" that the Court is concerned about is a state's knowledge that a Spending Clause condition requires waiver of immunity, nota state's knowledge that it has immunity that it could assert. At bottom, we conclude that if Congress satisfies the clear-statement rule, the knowledge prong of the Spending Clause waiver analysis is fulfilled.

ii. Non-Coercive: "Voluntary"

If the clear-statement rule is satisfied, a state's actual acceptance of clearly conditioned funds is generally voluntary. The only exception to this presumption arises if the spending program itself is deemed "coercive," for then a state's waiver is, by definition, no longer voluntary.

In summary, the Supreme Court has articulated two ways that a state can be subject to an individual's suit in federal court, regardless of the Eleventh Amendment. First, Congress may abrogate state immunity. Second, the state may waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity by consent. If waiver results from participation in a Spending Clause program, the program must be a valid exercise of Congress's spending power; the waiver condition must satisfy the clear-statement rule (thereby ensuring that the state's waiver is "knowing"); and the program must be non-coercive (automatically establishing that the waiver is "voluntary").

C. WAIVER OF ELEVENTH AMENDMENT IMMUNITY PURSUANT TO CONDITIONAL SPENDING PROGRAMS

Keeping firmly in mind the Court's current framework for analyzing when a state may be subject to suit in federal court, we turn to the particular facts and legal contentions of the instant case. The two statutory provisions at issue purport to have conditioned Louisiana's receipt of federal funds on its waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity to suits under § 504 and the IDEA. Specifically, 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7 conditions a state's receipt of federal money on its waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity to actions under § 504 and other federal anti-discrimination statutes:

28. See also Dole, 483 U.S. at 207.

A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, or the provisions of any other Federal statute prohibiting discrimination by recipients of Federal financial assistance.²⁹

Similarly, 20 U.S.C. § 1403³⁰ conditions a state's receipt of federal IDEA funds on its consent to suit under that Act.³¹ Applying the 29. 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7(a)(1). Congress enacted § 2000d-7 in response to Atascadero, in which the Court held that the Rehabilitation Act neither abrogated Eleventh Amendment immunity nor effectively conditioned states' receipt of federal funds on a waiver of that immunity. Atascadero, 473 U.S. at 245-47. According to the Court, the statute did not contain a clear statement of congressional intent either to abrogate or to require a waiver. Id.

30. 20 U.S.C. § 1403(a) reads as follows: "A State shall not be immune under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of this chapter."

31. The section was passed by Congress in response to Dellmuth v. Muth, 491 U.S. 223 (1989). In Dellmuth, the Supreme Court held that the predecessor to the IDEA (the Education of the Handicapped Act) framework set forth in Dole, we proceed to determine whether Louisiana validly waived its immunity when it accepted the conditioned federal dollars.

Louisiana does not dispute that the first and third prongs of the Dole analysis, i.e., whether the Spending Clause statute at issue was enacted in pursuit of the general welfare, and whether the condition is sufficiently related to the federal interest in the program funded,³² are satisfied here. Consequently, we restrict our consideration to the three remaining prongs of the Dole test. Following prior panels of this court,³³ and every circuit (but one) that has made these lacked a sufficiently clear statement of Congressional intent to abrogate Eleventh Amendment immunity to claims under the statute. Id. at 232. The conditional-spending issue was not raised in the case.

32. In its en banc brief, Louisiana mentioned a relatedness challenge to § 2000d-7, but that argument was not presented to the panel, and Louisiana's en banc brief fails to develop it beyond a bare assertion. Thus, Louisiana has waived its relatedness challenge. See L & A Contracting Co. v. S. Concrete Servs., Inc., 17 F.3d 106, 113 (5th Cir. 1994); FED. R. APP. P. 28(a)(9)(A); cf. Koslow v. Pennsylvania, 302 F.3d 161, 175-76 (3d Cir. 2002) (rejecting a relatedness challenge to the validity of a state's conditional-spending waiver of immunity to § 504 suits).

33. E.g., Pederson v. Louisiana State Univ., 213 F.3d 858, 876 (5th Cir. 2000) ("A state may waive its immunity by voluntarily participating in federal spending programs when Congress expresses a clear intent to condition participation in the programs ... on a State's consent to waive its constitutional immunity.") (citation and quotation marks omitted); id. at 875 (holding that "in enacting § 2000d-7 Congress permissibly conditioned a state university's receipt of [federal] funds on an unambiguous waiver of the university's Eleventh Amendment immunity, and that, in accepting such funding, the university has consented to litigate private suits in federal court.") (internal punctuation and citation inquiries, we conclude that the statutes at issue validly conditioned Louisiana's receipt of these federal funds on its waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity.³⁴

First, we determine whether the conditions contained in 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7 and 20 U.S.C. § 1403 are unambiguous and, omitted) (emphasis added). Cf. AT&T Comm. v. BellSouth Telecom. Inc., 238 F.3d 636, 645 (5th Cir.), reh'g en banc denied, 252 F.3d 437 (2001) ("[A]fter College Savings, Congress may still obtain a non-verbal voluntary waiver of a state's Eleventh Amendment immunity, if the waiver can be inferred from the state's conduct in accepting a gratuity after being given clear and unambiguous statutory notice that it was conditioned on waiver of immunity.").

34. Eight circuits have reached this conclusion in § 504 cases. See Nieves -Marquez v. Puerto Rico, 353 F.3d 108, 129-30 (1st Cir. 2003); A.W. v. Jersey City Pub. Schs., 341 F.3d 234, 244-51 (3d Cir. 2003); Bruggeman v. Blagojevich, 324 F.3d 906, 912 (7th Cir. 2003); Ga. t.t.v. Univ. of Ala. at Birmingham Bd. of Trs., 344 F.3d 1288, 1292-93 (11th Cir. 2003) (per curiam); Lovell v. Chandler, 303 F.3d 1039, 1051-52 (9th Cir. 2002); Koslow, 302 F.3d at 172 (3d Cir.); Rosen v. Kansas, 295 F.3d 1183, 1189-90 (10th Cir. 2002); Nihiser v. Ohio E.P.A., 269 F.3d 626, 628 (6th Cir. 2001); Jim C. v. Arkansas Dep't of Educ., 235 F.3d 1079, 1081 (8th Cir. 2000) (en banc); Stanley v. Litscher, 213 F.3d 340, 344 (7th Cir. 2000). Other courts of appeals have reached the same conclusion for the other predicate statutes of § 2000d-7. See, e.g., Cherry v. Univ. of Wis. Sys. Bd. of Regents, 265 F.3d 541, 553-55 (7th Cir. 2001) (Title IX); Sandoval v. Hagan, 197 F.3d 484 (11th Cir. 1999) (Title VI), rev'd in part on other grounds, 532 U.S. 275 (2001); Litman v. George Mason Univ., 186 F.3d 544 (4th Cir. 1999) (Title IX). Circuits have reached this conclusion about the IDEA, as well. See, e.g., M.A. ex rel. E.S. v. State-Operated School Dist., 344 F.3d 335, 351 (3d Cir. 2003); Oak Park Bd. of Educ. v. Kelly E., 207 F.3d 931, 935 (7th Cir. 2000).

consequently, whether Louisiana knowingly waived its immunity to actions under § 504 and the IDEA by accepting federal funds.

1. Is the Clear-Statement Rule Satisfied Absent Use of the Words "Waiver" or "Condition"?

In the face of the unequivocal language of § 2000d-7 to the effect that "[a] state shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973,³⁵ Louisiana argues legalistically that, because Congress did not use the words "waiver" or "condition," the condition fails the clear-statement rule.³⁶ This argument — that absent talismanic incantations of magic words, there can be no waiver — is little more than frivolous.³⁷ The Supreme Court has already noted, albeit in dicta, that in § 2000d-7 "Congress sought to provide the sort of unequivocal waiver that our precedents demand."³⁸ More importantly, our decision in Pederson v. Louisiana State University, 35. 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7 (2000).

36. In its amicus brief, the State of Texas points to other statutes that have used such terms.

37. Cf. Woods v. Cloyd W. Miller Co., 333 U.S. 138, 144 (1948) ("The question of the constitutionality of action taken by Congress does not depend on recitals of the power which it undertakes to exercise.").

38. Lane v. Pena, 518 U.S. 187, 198 (1996). See also id. at 200 (noting "the care with which Congress responded to ... Atascadero by crafting an unambiguous waiver of the States' Eleventh Amendment immunity").

which we remain convinced was correctly decided, forecloses this line of attack.³⁹

2. Does the Presence of Abrogation Language Preclude a Finding of Waiver?

Louisiana also argues that because § 2000d-7 and § 1403 fail as § 5 attempts by Congress to abrogate Eleventh Amendment immunity, the same provisions of those statutes cannot satisfy the clear-statement rule for Spending Clause purposes. We reject Louisiana's attempt to pigeonhole this statutory language in mutually exclusive terms.

We held in Pederson that, in § 2000d-7, Congress "successfully codified a statute which clearly, unambiguously, and unequivocally conditions receipt of federal funds under Title IX on the State's waiver of Eleventh Amendment Immunity."⁴⁰ And in Lesage v. Texas,⁴¹ we ruled that "Congress unquestionably enacted 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7 with the 'intent' to invoke the Fourteenth Amendment's congressional enforcement power. The purpose of the provision, enacted in 1986, was to legislatively overrule the result in Atascadero.⁴² Thus, in Pederson, we recognized § 2000d-7 as a 39. 213 F.3d at 875-76 (adopting the holding and reasoning of Litman v. George Mason Univ., 186 F.3d 544 (4th Cir. 1999)).

40. 213 F.3d at 876.

41. 158 F.3d 213 (5th Cir. 1998), overruled on other grounds, 528 U.S. 18 (1999).

42. Id. at 218. See also United States v. Wells, 519 U.S. 482, 495 (1997) (reiterating the baseline presumption that Congress expects its statutes to be read in conformity with the Supreme Court's precedents).

clear statement for waiver vis-a-vis the Spending Clause, and in Lesage, we recognized that the very same provision could satisfy abrogation under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Just because particular language may or may not function with equal efficacy under both exceptions to Eleventh Amendment immunity, does not mean that it fails the clear-statement rule. As we concluded in AT&T, the rule requires only that "the state has been put on notice clearly and unambiguously by the federal statute that the state's particular conduct or transaction will subject it to federal court suits brought by individuals."⁴³ Congress need not declare in the statute whether it is proceeding under abrogation or waiver, or both. For the purpose of the clear-statement rule, § 2000d-7 — janus-faced as it may be — poses no constitutional impediment to our finding valid waiver by consent. We conclude that the conditions contained in § 2000d-7 and § 1403 are unambiguous, as required by Dole.

Undaunted, Louisiana still contends that it did not knowingly waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity. Louisiana and the dissent rely on Garcia v. S.U.N.Y. Health Sciences Ctr.,⁴⁴ which looked to the Supreme Court's decision in Board of Trustees of the University of Alabama v. Garrett⁴⁵ to justify departing from the heavy weight of authority supporting waiver based on the clarity of the language in § 2000d-7. Garrett examined whether, in Title I of the ADA, Congress could constitutionally abrogate the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity.⁴⁶ The Garrett Court concluded

43. 238 F.3d at 644.

44. 280 F.3d 98 (2d Cir. 2001).

45. 531 U.S. 356 (2001).

46. See id. at 365-74.

that Title I of the ADA was outside the scope of valid § 5 legislation; therefore, Congress's attempt at abrogation failed, and private suits against states in federal court were barred by the Eleventh Amendment.⁴⁷

The lawsuits in Garcia involved disputes that arose between September 1993 and August 1995.⁴⁸ During that pre-Garrett period, it was universally accepted that the ADA validly abrogated Eleventh Amendment immunity. Rather than looking at the clear-statement rule and the state's acceptance of funds, Garcia analyzed whether a state would have realized — "known" — that it was abandoning its Eleventh Amendment immunity by accepting federal funds during the period of time applicable to the lawsuits at issue there (and here).⁴⁹ The Garcia court noted that, during the relevant period, "Title II of the ADA was reasonably understood to abrogate [the state's] sovereign immunity under Congress's Commerce Clause authority."⁵⁰ The court also pointed out that the requirements of Title II and § 504 are "virtually identical."⁵¹ Therefore, concluded the court, because the state defendant thought that it could be sued under Title II, it had nothing to lose by accepting federal funds and redundantly waiving immunity to § 504 suits in the process.⁵²

47. Id. at 374.

48. Garcia, 280 F.3d at 114 n.4.

49. Id. at 114.

50. Id.

51. Id.

52. Id.

Louisiana and the dissent maintain that we should follow the panel and apply the "logic" of Garcia to the instant case. First, Louisiana contends that, because it "believed" that the Rehabilitation Act had already abrogated its Eleventh Amendment immunity, it "did not and could not know that [it] retained any sovereign immunity to waive by accepting conditioned federal funds."⁵³ Likewise, Louisiana asks us to conclude that § 1403 was an unsuccessful attempt at abrogation; therefore, maintains Louisiana, it could not have "knowingly" waived its immunity under the IDEA when it accepted federal IDEA funds.

Even though it found that the statutory provisions at issue are unambiguous,⁵⁴ the panel nevertheless concluded that Louisiana's purported waivers of Eleventh Amendment immunity are invalid because they were not knowing. The panel drew support from the holding in Garcia, but its reasoning differed slightly from the Second Circuit's. According to the panel opinion, "[b]elieving that [the Rehabilitation Act and the IDEA] validly abrogated their sovereign immunity, the State defendants did not and could not know that they retained any sovereign immunity to waive by accepting conditioned federal funds."⁵⁵

The fatal flaw with that syllogism lies in the fact that neither the mandates of the Rehabilitation Act nor the requirements of the IDEA apply to a state agency that has not received either some federal funding (in the case of the Rehabilitation Act) or federal

53. Pace, 325 F.3d at 616.

54. Pace, 325 F.3d at 615.

55. Pace, 325 F.3d at 616.

IDEA dollars (in the case of the IDEA).⁵⁶ Therefore, it is impossible for Congress to have "abrogated" a state's immunity to § 504 or IDEA suits if the relevant state agency did not receive federal funds during the time period in which it was alleged to have violated an individual's statutory rights. It follows indisputably that Louisiana's Eleventh Amendment immunity to § 504 and IDEA claims was intact before the state accepted federal funds. Thus, Louisiana did have Eleventh Amendment immunity to waive by accepting the clearly conditioned federal funds.

The dissent nevertheless insists that, during the time that § 504 and the IDEA were thought to abrogate Eleventh Amendment immunity, Louisiana could have believed that it lacked immunity to § 504 and IDEA suits even before it received federal funds under those statutes.⁵⁷ This ignores the conditional-spending nature of the Rehabilitation Act and the IDEA. The Acts' substantive provisions regulate only state agencies that have accepted the relevant federal funds. Thus, it makes no sense to say that the State was subject to private actions for damages under § 504 and the IDEA before the substantive provisions of those statutes applied to it. Contrary to the dissent's accusation,⁵⁸ we do not confuse the doctrines of abrogation and waiver; rather, we point out that — even before Garrett—

56. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a) (prohibiting discrimination against the disabled through "any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance"); 20 U.S.C. §§ 1412, 1415 (conditioning state agencies' receipt of federal funds on compliance with the requirements of the IDEA).

57. Post at 9 ("[T]he State acted quite rationally in assuming between 1996 and 1998 that it had no sovereign immunity to waive when it accepted federal education funds under conditions specified by § 504 and IDEA.").

58. Post at 10 & n.7.

Louisiana could have avoided suits under § 504 and the IDEA altogether by declining federal funding. Louisiana clearly had Eleventh Amendment immunity to waive at the time that it accepted the federal funds and expressly obligated itself to comply with the dictates of the Rehabilitation Act and the IDEA.

Further, during the relevant time period, §§ 2000d-7 and 1403 put each state on notice that, by accepting federal money, it was waiving its Eleventh Amendment immunity. Under Dole, if the clear-statement requirement is met, the state is conclusively presumed to have "known" that receipt of clearly conditioned federal funds requires the state to abide by the condition (i.e., waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity).

In addition, the Garcia approach is problematic for a number of reasons, the most fundamental of which is that, by focusing its inquiry on what the state could have believed, the Second Circuit grafted a subjective-intent element onto the otherwise objective Spending Clause waiver inquiry. In other words, Garcia's approach employs the wrong jurisprudential test, because it distorts what is necessary to show knowledge for Spending Clause waivers. Analytically, the "knowledge" question that we ask when we undertake the Spending Clause waiver inquiry is coextensive with the clear-statement rule; for, when a state actually accepts funds that are clearly conditioned on a waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity, it is held objectively to "know" that it is accepting all clearly stated conditions. That it might not "know" subjectively whether it had any immunity to waive by agreeing to those conditions is wholly irrelevant.

The dissent asserts that, by focusing on the clear-statement requirement, we have disregarded College Savings Bank's "clear declaration" requirement. But College Savings Bank was not a conditional-spending case. There, the Court invalidated "constructive waivers" of Eleventh Amendment immunity "based upon the State's mere presence in a field subject to congressional regulation.⁵⁹ Such a constructive waiver is a far cry from a state's acceptance of federal funds that are explicitly conditioned on its waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity. In fact, the College Savings Bank opinion expressly distinguished conditional-spending waivers of Eleventh Amendment immunity, which it said were "fundamentally different from" illegitimate constructive waivers.⁶⁰ Nothing in College Savings Bank indicates that, when the clear-statement requirement is met, a state can be said to lack knowledge that by accepting federal funds it waives its Eleventh Amendment immunity.

In sum, Garcia and the dissent would subjugate the bright-line of objective reasoning to the slippery slope of assessing a state's subjective belief.⁶¹ If, like the panel, we were to follow that approach, we would be getting into the business of looking past the straight forward objective facts, i.e., (1) the clear statement requiring waiver and (2) the state's actual, uncoerced acceptance of federal funds, in an attempt to fathom what was in a state's "head," a precarious exercise indeed. The clear-statement rule guards against post hoc questions about intent.

Accordingly, we hold that Louisiana's waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity to actions under § 504 and the IDEA was knowing.⁶² Still, we must determine whether an independent 59. College Savings Bank, 527 U.S. at 680.

60. Id. at 686.

61. See Lapides v. Bd. of Regents, 535 U.S. 613, 621 (2002) ("Motives are difficult to evaluate, while jurisdictional rules should be clear.").

62. Since the Pace panel opinion was issued, five circuits have expressly rejected its approach, which the dissent continues to advocate.

constitutional bar prevents Congress from conditioning the receipt of federal funds on a state's waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity.

3. Can Congress Condition Waiver of Eleventh Amendment Immunity When It Exercises its Spending Power?

Louisiana challenges Congress's power under the Spending Clause to condition receipt of federal education funds on a state's waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity. This position is frivolous. We have consistently interpreted Supreme Court guidance as permitting such conditional spending programs, as has every other circuit that has squarely addressed the issue.⁶³ We do not change course today.

See Nieves-Marquez, 353 F.3d at 129-30 (First Circuit); A.W., 341 F.3d at 244-52 (Third Circuit); Shepard v. Irving, 77 Fed. Appx. 615, 619 n.2 (4th Cir. 2003) (unpublished); Doe v. Nebraska, 345 F.3d 593, 600-604 (8th Cir. 2003); Garrett, 344 F.3d at 1292-93 (Eleventh Circuit). See also Koslow, 302 F.3d at 172 n.12 (explaining that "the 'clear intent to condition participation in the programs funded,' required by Atascadero, 473 U.S. at 247, ensured the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania knew that by accepting certain funds under the Rehabilitation Act for certain departments or agencies, it waived immunity from suit on Rehabilitation Act claims for those entities").

63. See, e.g., Arecibo Cnty. Health Care, Inc. v. Puerto Rico, 270 F.3d 17, 24-25 (1st Cir. 2001); Garcia, 280 F.3d at 113; Koslow, 302 F.3d at 172; Pederson, 213 F.3d at 875-76; Nihiser v. Ohio E.P.A., 269 F.3d 626, 628 (6th Cir. 2001); Stanley v. Litscher, 213 F.3d 340, 344 (7th Cir. 2000); Jim C., 235 F.3d at 1081; Douglas v. Cal. Dep't of Youth Auth., 271 F.3d 812, 819, as amended, 271 F.3d 910 (9th Cir. 2001); Robinson, 295 F.3d at 1189-90; Sandoval, 197 F.3d at 493.

4. Is Conditioning Acceptance of Federal Funds a Violation of the Unconstitutional-Conditions Doctrine?

Louisiana also attempts to invoke the "unconstitutional-conditions doctrine" to challenge Congress's ability to condition the acceptance of federal funds on waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity. In the most general sense, the unconstitutional-conditions doctrine examines the extent to which government benefits may be conditioned or distributed in ways that burden constitutional rights or principles.⁶⁴ For at least two reasons, Louisiana's reliance on the unconstitutional-conditions doctrine is misplaced.

First, as evidenced by the dearth of cases employing it in this context,⁶⁵ the unconstitutional-conditions doctrine is most meaningful when the government imposes a condition of 64. See Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Com. of Cal., 271 U.S. 583, 593-94 (1926) ("[T]he state ... may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of constitutional rights....It is inconceivable that guaranties embedded in the Constitution of the United States may thus be manipulated out of existence.").

65. The only Supreme Court decision that has come close was United States v. Butler. In that 1936 decision, the Court invalidated provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933, which paid farmers to reduce their production of crops. 297 U.S. at 74-78. As the Tenth Circuit has explained, though, "that case relied on an overly narrow view of Congress' enumerated powers to determine that Congress had overstepped its authority." Kansas v. United States, 214 F.3d 1196, 1201 n.6 (10th Cir. 2000) (citing LAURENCE H. TRIBE, AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL LAW § 5-b, at 836 (3d ed. 2000)) ("[T]he Supreme Court has effectively ignored Butler in judging the limits of congressional spending power.")). Accord Lipscomb, 299 F.3d at 319 (noting that the Supreme Court "quickly abandoned" the view espoused in Butler).

questionable constitutional character on an individual right. But here, federal and state sovereigns are on opposite sides of the controversy, and the constitutional "right" at issue is structural rather than personal. Consequently, for the reasons announced in the Third Circuit's analysis in Koslow v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the doctrine is inapplicable. The Koslow court considered whether the Rehabilitation Act, including § 2000d-7, imposed an unconstitutional condition on Pennsylvania's receipt of federal funds. In refusing to apply the unconstitutional-conditions doctrine to the conditioning of federal funds on the waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity, the Third Circuit stated:

[T]he Supreme Court has not yet applied the "unconstitutional conditions" doctrine to cases between two sovereigns. Unlike private persons, states have the resources to serve their citizens even if the federal government, through economic incentives, encourages a particular result. A state's political powers—not the least of which is the power to levy taxes on its citizens—help ensure the federal government does not "coerce" the state through economic "encouragement." An individual citizen, in contrast, lacks these formidable institutional resources.⁶⁶

We embrace that reasoning.

Second, the unconstitutional-conditions doctrine, even when applied piecemeal by the supreme court, is anchored at least in part in a theory of coercion or compulsion.⁶⁷ In this context, that 66. 302 F.3d at 174 (citing Frost & Frost, 271 U.S. at 593; New York, 505 U.S. at 171-72; Dole, 483 U.S. at 210-11).

67. See id. ("The "unconstitutional conditions" doctrine is based on the proposition that government incentives may be inherently coercive.").

concern is subsumed in the non-coercion prong of the Dole test.⁶⁸ In other words, in the Spending Clause context, any role that the unconstitutional-conditions doctrine might have in cabining Congress's authority to give funds in exchange for waiving immunity is already part-and-parcel of the standard Spending Clause analysis. Thus, no independent constitutional bar invalidates Louisiana's waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity.

5. Are These Programs Coercive?

In light of Dole, we must determine whether the conditional-spending schemes at issue are unduly coercive. We hold that they are not. A state can prevent suits against a particular agency under § 504 by declining federal funds for that agency.⁶⁹ A state can avoid suit under the IDEA merely by refusing IDEA funds. And, to do so in either case, the state would not have to refuse all federal assistance.⁷⁰ Moreover, no circuit has accepted a coercion challenge to either the Rehabilitation Act or the IDEA.⁷¹ Therefore, we refuse to invalidate Louisiana's waiver on coercion grounds.

See also Kathleen M. Sullivan, Unconstitutional Conditions, 102 HARV. L. REV. 1415, 1428-55 (1989).

68. See supra text accompanying note 24.

69. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(b)(1).

70. See 20 U.S.C. §§ 1411(a)(1), 1412, 1403.

71. See, e.g., Jim C., 235 F.3d at 1082 (rejecting a coercion challenge to the validity of a waiver of state Eleventh Amendment immunity to § 504 claims).

D. ABROGATION OF IMMUNITY

Alternatively, Pace asks this en banc court to rule that Congress — acting under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment — in fact abrogated Louisiana's Eleventh Amendment immunity, leaving Louisiana subject to suit on Pace's ADA, Rehabilitation Act, and IDEA claims. As we hold that Louisiana waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity with respect to the Rehabilitation Act and the IDEA, it is not necessary for us to address Pace's contention that Louisiana's immunity to suit under those statutes was also abrogated. Neither is it necessary for us to consider whether Title II of the ADA abrogates Eleventh Amendment immunity in this case. First, the Supreme Court, in Tennessee v. Lane,⁷² held that Title II abrogates sovereign immunity to the extent that it implicates the accessibility of judicial services, but refused to consider its application to other rights, including those considered to be fundamental under the Constitution.⁷³ Because (1) the Supreme Court has never before recognized access to public education⁷⁴ or freedom from disability discrimination in education⁷⁵ to be fundamental rights, and (2) it is unnecessary to address Pace's Title II claims given that its rights and remedies are identical to and duplicative of those provided in § 504, we do not address whether the holding in Lane extends to disability discrimination in access to public education.

72. 72 124 S. Ct. 1978 (2004).

73. Id. At 1993.

74. See Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 221, 223 (1982) (although important, education is not a fundamental constitutional right).

75. Cf. City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 446 (1985) (disability classifications are subject only to rational-basis scrutiny).

Second, when ADA claims are directed at architectural barriers, as they are here, the rights and remedies are exactly the same as those provided under the Rehabilitation Act. This circuit, as well as others, has noted that, because the rights and remedies under both statutes are the same, case law interpreting one statute can be applied to the other.⁷⁶ The implementing regulations for §504 and Title II are, in all material respects, the same. For example, both statutes' implementing regulations prohibit similar types of discrimination.⁷⁷ In addition, § 504 and Title II's regulations governing new construction and alterations are 76. See Hainze v. Richards, 207 F.3d 795, 799 (5th Cir. 2000) (internal citations omitted) ("The language of Title II generally tracks the language of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and Congress' intent was that Title II extend the protections of the Rehabilitation Act 'to cover all programs of state or local governments, regardless of the receipt of federal financial assistance' and that it 'work in the same manner as Section 504.' In fact, the statute specifically provides that '[t]he remedies, procedures and rights' available under Section 504 shall be the same as those available under Title II. Jurisprudence interpreting either section is applicable to both."); Washington v. Indiana High Sch. Athletic Ass'n, Inc., 181 F.3d 840, 845 n.6 (7th Cir. 1999) ("Title II of the ADA was modeled after § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act; the elements of claims under the two provisions are nearly identical, and precedent under one statute typically applies to the other."); Gorman v. Bartz, 152 F.3d 907, 912 (8th Cir. 1998) ("The ADA has no federal funding requirement, but it is otherwise similar in substance to the Rehabilitation Act, and 'cases interpreting either are applicable and interchangeable.'"); McPherson v. Michigan High Sch. Ath. Ass'n, 119 F.3d 453, 459-60 (6th Cir. 1997)(en banc) (same).

77. Compare 28 C.F.R. § 42.520, with 28 C.F.R. § 35.149. Similarly, § 504 and Title II's regulations regarding existing facilities are nearly identical. Compare 28 C.F.R. 42.521(a), with 28 C.F.R. 35.150(a).

effectively the same.⁷⁸ The two statutes are interpreted to provide the same exception: No covered entity is obligated to make a "fundamental alteration" in its programs.⁷⁹ Finally, the remedies available under § 504 and Title II are one and the same. Specifically, § 203 of Title II states that "[t]he remedies, procedures, and rights set forth in section 505 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794a) shall be the remedies, procedures, and rights this title provides to any person alleging discrimination on the basis of disability in violation of section 202 [of the ADA].⁸⁰ Section 505(a)(2) of the Rehabilitation Act, in turn, states that the "remedies, procedures, and rights set forth in title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964... shall be available" for violations of § 504.⁸¹ Thus, in Barnes v. Gorman,⁸² the Supreme Court held that "the remedies for violations of § 202 of the ADA and § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act are coextensive with the remedies available in a private cause of action brought under Title VI" of the Civil Rights Act.⁸³ For all intents and purposes, therefore, the remedies

78. Compare 28 C.F.R. 42.522(a), with 28 C.F.R. 35.151(a).

79. Compare Alexander v. Choate, 469 U.S. 287 (1995) (Section 504 does not require covered entities to make fundamental alterations in their programs); with 28 C.F.R. § 35.150(a) (2) - (3) (Title II does not require public entities to make fundamental alterations in the nature of a program, service, or activity). This requirement, however, does not excuse the failure to make altered or new facilities accessible. Compare 28 C.F.R. § 35.151(a)-(b), with 28C.F.R. § 42.522(a).

80. 8042 U.S.C. § 12133.

81. 29 U.S.C. § 794a(a) (2) .

82. 531 U.S. 181 (2002).

83. Id. at 185.

available to Pace under § 504 and Title II are the same. The sole difference between the statutes lies in their causation requirements.⁸⁴ This difference is not implicated, however, where, as here, the challenge is to architectural barriers.

In conclusion, we hold that for all the foregoing reasons, Louisiana is not entitled to assert sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment in this case. With that issue determined, we proceed to the question of issue preclusion.

III. MERITS

We turn now to the merits of Pace's arguments that the district court erred in denying relief to him under the IDEA, the ADA and § 504.

A. IDEA

We agree with and adopt that portion of the panel opinion affirming the district court's judgment which in turn affirmed the administrative determination that Pace was not entitled to relief under the IDEA.

We pause only to emphasize the somewhat unusual nature of a proceeding under the IDEA . As required by the statute,⁸⁵ Pace first pursued his administrative claim. He was granted a hearing by a hearing examiner where he had an opportunity to present his evidence demonstrating that the inaccessibility of various portions of the Bogalusa campus prevented him from receiving a free and appropriate public education (FAPE). The hearing examiner, after hearing the evidence and making a personal inspection of the campus, rejected Pace's inaccessibility claims and concluded that the defendants had complied with the IDEA and had provided a FAPE to Pace.⁸⁶ Pace then challenged the hearing examiner's findings and conclusion in his administrative appeal to the State Level Review Panel (SLRP). The SLP also rejected Pace's claims and affirmed the hearing examiner in all respects.⁸⁷ Pace then filed suit in federal district court as authorized by 20 U.S.C. § 1415(i)(1)(A). A district court in which such an action is filed must receive the record generated by the administrative proceeding and also hear additional evidence presented by the parties.⁸⁸ The court must then give "due weight" to the hearing officer's finding and make a de novo determination based on a preponderance of the evidence. Teague Independent School District v. Todd L., 999 F.2d 127, 131 (5th Cir. 1993). The district court considered all of Pace's claims of inaccessibility that he raised during the administrative proceedings.⁸⁹ The court considered the administrative record along

84. See Soledad v. U.S. Dept. of Treasury, 304 F. 3d 500 (5th Cir.2002).

85. See 20 U.S.C. 1415(1).

86. The hearing examiner thoroughly reviewed the testimony and physical evidence presented to her and rejected in wholesale fashion Pace's various claims of inaccessibility. R. 94.

87. The language used by the SLP also makes it clear that this review panel found absolutely no merit to Pace's inaccessibility claims. R. 64-65.

88. See 20 U.S.C. § 1415 (i) (2) (A) (Any party aggrieved by the findings and decisions...shall have the right to bring a civil action with respect to the complaint pursuant to this section, which action may be brought...in a district court of the United States ...).

89. Pace sought relief from the district court to remedy the school board's refusal to make the following areas accessible:

- bathroom facilities
- classrooms on the second rather than first floor of the school with the new evidence offered by Pace and gave "due weight" to the findings of the hearing examiner and SLRP. Ultimately, the district court agreed with the hearing examiner that Bogalusa High School had provided Pace with a FAPE by complying with the IDEA in all aspects, including that the campus was accessible to the wheelchair-bound Pace. The district court's conclusion is fully supported by the record and we therefore affirm the district court's rejection of Pace's claims under the IDEA.

B. ADA AND SECTION 504

In addition to his IDEA claims, Pace also asserted claims under the ADA and § 504 in his suit. The district court severed the IDEA claims from these non-IDEA claims. After dismissing Pace's IDEA claims, the district court then considered defendants' motion for summary judgment seeking exoneration under § 504 and the ADA. The district court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment on grounds that the factual bases for the non-IDEA claims were indistinct from the resolved IDEA claims. The district court concluded further that principles of issue preclusion applied to preclude Pace from pursuing his redundant non-IDEA claims. Pace argues that the district court committed legal error in applying principles of issue preclusion to bar his non-IDEA claims.

Issue preclusion or collateral estoppel is appropriate when: (1) the identical issue was previously adjudicated; (2) the issue was

-
- elevator access
 - exiting classroom during fire drills
 - cafeteria
 - school health center
 - auditorium
 - music room
 - insufficient parking spaces
 - lack of ramps (accessible entrances) actually litigated; and (3) the previous determination was necessary to the decision. See Southmark Corp. v. Coopers & Lybrand (In re: Southmark Corp.), 163 F.3d 925, 932 (5thCir. 1999). In Southmark we also found that the "relitigation of an issue isnot precluded unless the facts and the legal standard used to assess them are the same in both proceedings." Id. (quoting RecoverEdge L.P. v. Pentecost, 44 F.3d 1284, 1281 (5th Cir. 1995)). Issues of fact are not "identical" or "the same," and therefore not preclusive, if the legal standards governing their resolution are "significantly different."⁹⁰ Pace argues that the accessibility issues the court litigated under the IDEA were for the limited purpose of determining whether the Bogalusa High School provided Pace with a FAPE under that statute. Thus, Pace contends, because a "significantly different" legal standard applies to his accessibility issues under the ADA and § 504, these latter claims were never litigated and issue preclusion should not apply. We therefore compare the standards of accessibility under the IDEA on the one hand and the ADA and § 504 on the other to determine whether the legal standards are "significantly different."

As indicated above, the IDEA requires states and local educational agencies receiving federal IDEA funds to make a FAPE

90. See, e.g., 18 JAMES WM. MOORE, ET AL., MOORE'S FEDERAL PRACTICE 3d § 132.02[2] [h](3d ed. 2001). Courts have used slightly differing language to express this idea that legal issues are not "identical" for issue preclusion purposes if they are significantly different. Compare Raytech Corp. v. White, 54 F.3d 187, 191 (3d Cir. 1995) (the differences in the standards must be "substantial") with Talcott v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd., 444 F.2d 451, 460 (5th Cir. 1971) (the legal standards are not identical for issue preclusion purposes only when there is a "demonstrable difference" in the legal standards by which the facts are evaluated). For purposes of this appeal, these distinctions are irrelevant.

available to children with certain disabilities between the ages of 3 and 21. The IDEA imposes extensive requirements on schools to safeguard the disabled child's right to a FAPE. 20 U.S.C. §§ 1414, 1415. In determining whether a school has provided a student with a FAPE, the focus is on the Individualized Education Plan (IEP), a written statement prepared by a team consisting of a representative of the local school district, the disabled child's teachers, the child's parents and the child. 20 U.S.C. § 1414(d). The IEP includes the child's educational performance, his goals, the nature of his disabilities, and a description of the educational and related services that will be provided for the child to meet the stated objectives. The objective is always to tailor the FAPE to the particular needs of the child. Cypress Fairbanks ISD v. Michael F., 118 F.3d 245, 247 (5thCir. 1997).

The goal of the IDEA is to require a FAPE that will permit the child "to benefit" from the educational experience. It need not be the best possible education nor one that will maximize the child's educational potential. Bd. of Education v. Rowley, 458 U.S. 176 (1982).

Admittedly different from those underlying the IDEA, the Congressional objective of both the ADA and § 504 is the elimination of discrimination against individuals with disabilities. 42 U.S.C. § 12101(b) (1). Title II of the ADA, which applies to public entities including public schools, provides that "no qualified individual with a disability shall, by reason of such disability, be excluded from participation in or be denied the benefits of the services, programs or activities of a public entity or be subjected to discrimination by any such entity." 42 U.S.C. § 12132. See also 28 C.F.R. § 35.130(a). Section 504 contains virtually identical language. See 29 U.S.C. § 784(a). Mandating physical accessibility and the removal and amelioration of architectural barriers is an important purpose of each statute.⁹¹ The primary difference between the ADA and § 504 is that § 504 applies only to recipients of federal funds. 29 U.S.C. § 794(a). This difference does not concern us in this case because no defendant argues that it does not receive federal money. Thus, as we stated in section II-D above, for the purposes of this appeal, the ADA and § 504 and their implementing regulations impose identical obligations on the defendants and grant identical rights to Pace.⁹²

In Pace's brief to us on his non-IDEA claims brought under § 504 and the ADA he complains only that parts of the Bogalusa High School campus are inaccessible to him. The only § 504 regulations dealing with accessibility in education are found in subpart C of the § 504 regulations. 34 C.F.R. §§ 104.21-104.23. Section 104.23 of § 504's regulations deals with new construction on school campuses, the basis of Pace's complaints in this suit. Subpart D of the § 504 regulations deals with preschool, elementary, and secondary education and those regulations do not purport to cover accessibility in schools.⁹³ Rather, 34 C.F.R. §§

91. See 42 U.S.C. § 12101(a)(5) ("The Congress finds that ...individuals with disabilities continually encounter various forms of discrimination, including...the discriminatory effects of architectural...barriers,... failure to make modifications to existing facilities[,]...segregation, and relegation to lesser services, programs, [and] activities..."); Id. § 12101(a)(4) ("The Congress finds that...discrimination against individuals with disabilities persists in such critical areas as education..."); Alexander v. Choate, 469 U.S. 287, 297 (1985) (noting that the "elimination of architectural barriers was one of the central aims of the Rehabilitation Act").

92. See note 78, supra.

93. Subpart D in the regulations to § 504 includes general regulations for preschool, elementary, and secondary education regarding 104.21-23, the general education regulations on accessibility found in subpart C of § 504 apply to new construction on high school campuses such as Bogalusa High.⁹⁴ The ADA has no specific section on education, so the general regulations governing accessibility to public buildings also control accessibility to school buildings.

With this background, we turn to Pace's specific argument that his accessibility claims under the ADA/504 are not precluded by the district court's rejection of his accessibility claims under the IDEA. He argues that his non-IDEA accessibility claims are not precluded because different legal standards apply to his ADA and § 504 accessibility claims, and these claims have never been litigated or decided. When we consider the equivalent standards for accessibility in schools under the IDEA on the one hand and the ADA/504 on the other, it becomes clear that we should reject this argument.

Congress required in a 1997 amendment to the IDEA that any construction of new facilities must comply with either (1) The placement (34 C.F.R. § 104.35), procedural requirements (34 C.F.R. § 104.36) and the general FAPE requirement (34 C.F.R. § 104.33).

94. Although it is illogical to do so, one can read the § 504 regulations to say that a school need not comply with accessibility requirements in Subpart C to provide a § 504 FAPE under 104.33 when a student complains that part of a school's campus is inaccessible. In such a situation, it is more sensible to read these regulations as requiring a school's compliance with subpart C's accessibility requirements before it can be said to provide a § 504 FAPE. Regardless of whether the accessibility requirement s must be met before a § 504 FAPE is provided, subpart C of the § 504 regulations clearly requires new construction in the school to meet the regulation's accessibility requirements.

Americans with Disabilities Accessibility Guidelines for Buildings and Facilities (ADAAG); or (2) The Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (UFAS). 20 U.S.C. § 1404(b).⁹⁵ Thus, with respect to a physically disabled child such as the wheelchair-bound Pace, the school can comply with the IDEA's accessibility requirements by satisfying either the ADAAG or UFAS.⁹⁶

Pace presents no argument that the accessibility standards for new construction of school buildings under the ADA or § 504 are more demanding or even different from the standards required under the 1997 amendment to the IDEA. This is understandable, because the regulations governing accessibility in schools under the ADA/504 require a school engaged in new construction to conform to the same standards as the IDEA, either the ADAAG or UFAS.

95. 20 U.S.C. § 1404(b) provides in pertinent part:

...Any construction of new facilities or alteration of existing facilities under subsection (a) of this section shall comply with the requirements of

(1) appendix A of part 36 of title 28, Code of Federal Regulations (commonly known as the "Americans with Disabilities Accessibility Guidelines for Buildings and Facilities"); or

(2) appendix A of part 101-19.6 of title 41, Code of Federal Regulations (commonly known as the "Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards").

96. The corresponding regulation to 20 U.S.C. § 1404 is found at 34 C.F.R. § 300.756 and is identical.

New construction and alterations of public facilities under Title II of the ADA are governed by the regulations found in 28 C.F.R. § 35.151.⁹⁷ Like the IDEA, the ADA accessibility regulations require a school conducting new construction to comply with either the ADAAG or UFAS. Section 504's accessibility regulations are virtually identical to the ADA's,⁹⁸ and also demand that schools engaging in new construction comply with the same federal guidelines required by the IDEA. Thus, Pace's argument that the accessibility standards are different under IDEA and ADA/504 is meritless.

In summary, under the IDEA, when, as here, a child complains that his disability renders a portion of the campus inaccessible, this triggers the application of the 1997 amendments to the IDEA. In determining whether the school has met its obligations under the amendment and provided the disabled student with a FAPE, the hearing examiner, the SLP, and the district court must determine whether the area of the school in question complies with either the

97. 38 C.F.R. 35.151(c) provides in pertinent part:

(c) Accessibility standards. Design, construction, or alteration of facilities in conformance with the Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (UFAS)...or with the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines for Buildings and Facilities (ADAAG)...shall be deemed to comply with the requirements of this section with respect to those facilities...

98. One minor difference between the accessibility regulations under § 504 and the ADA is that, because § 504 preceded the ADA and the ADA-specific accessibility regulations (ADAAG), § 504 does not give schools the option of complying with either the ADAAG or UFAS (as do both the ADA and IDEA), but requires compliance with the UFAS.

ADAAG or UFAS. These are the same federal guidelines the school must comply with to satisfy the accessibility requirements of the ADA and§ 504.

Pace, as he was required to do by the IDEA, presented his accessibility claims in his administrative claim. In their administrative findings, both the hearing examiner and the SLRP discussed the 1997 amendment to the IDEA. This makes it clear that both were aware that new or existing construction to Bogalusa High School must meet either the ADAAG or UFAS standards before the school could fully comply with the IDEA.⁹⁹

The only significant summary judgment evidence Pace presented to the district court on his ADA/504 claims was the report and deposition testimony of Donald MaGinnis, an architectural expert. The point of his testimony is that structural changes to the Bogalusa campus failed to comply with the ADAAG. Although this same standard applied to Pace's claim under the IDEA, he did not introduce this evidence before the hearing examiner. Further, Pace failed to offer the expert evidence to the district court to support his appeal of the administrative determination under the IDEA. Because the accessibility standards under the IDEA and the

99. Page five of the State Level Review Panel's opinion, under the heading "Applicable Law and Regulations," provides:

Section 605 of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act Amendments of 1997, states that any construction of new facilities or alteration of existing facilities with use of program funds shall comply with the requirements of Americans with Disabilities Accessibility Guidelines (Appendix A of Part 36 of Title 28, Code of Federal Regulations) or Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (Appendix A of Part 101-19.6 of Title 41, Code of Federal Regulations). (R. 63).

ADA/504 are identical for new construction of school buildings, Pace has not demonstrated that the defendants owed him any greater or even different obligation in this respect under § 504/ADA than he was entitled to under the IDEA. Thus, the accessibility issue Pace litigated in his IDEA case and lost is the same issue he sought to litigate in his ADA/504 claim. The district court correctly concluded that Pace was precluded from relitigating this issue.

The only argument Pace presents to us on the applicability of the 1997 amendment was presented for the first time in his petition for en banc review. He argued in that petition and argues to the en banc court that the amendment was not triggered because no evidence was presented that "IDEA funds" were used to make the improvements to the Bogalusa campus. Pace relies on the following language in the 1997 amendment to 20 U.S.C. § 1404:

§ 1404. Acquisition of equipment; construction or alteration of facilities

(a) In general

If the Secretary determines that a program authorized under this chapter would be improved by permitting program funds to be used to acquire appropriate equipment, or to construct new facilities or alter existing facilities, the Secretary is authorized to allow the use of those funds for those purposes.

Neither the amendment nor the existing statute purports to require a plaintiff to prove the use of IDEA funds or any other fact as a predicate to seeking relief under the IDEA against a school for failing to make its campus accessible in response to a student's IEP. We have found no cases interpreting this amendment or its predecessor. Subsection (a) is simply a restyled version of the existing statute.¹⁰⁰ The change is found in Subsection (b), which incorporates into the IDEA for the first time the ADAAG and UFAS construction standards. The amended § 1404(a), like the existing statute, authorizes the Secretary to allow the use of IDEA funds for construction or alterations.

To support Pace's argument that the amended version of § 1404 does not apply in this case, amicus seems to argue that structural alterations to meet accessibility demands in a student's IEP are not part of the calculus in determining whether a student has received a FAPE.

In Weber's Special Education Law and Litigation Treatise, he rejects this suggestion in his cogent discussion of the interplay between the IDEA, § 504 and ADA:

Schools covered by Title II and Section 504 owe obligations not only to students with disabilities but to all persons with disabilities whom they serve. In this sense, the laws are more inclusive than the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), whose beneficiaries are children with disabilities who need special education. Nevertheless, by requiring school districts to provide an

100. The pre-amended version of 20 U.S.C. 1404(a) provided as follows: (a) Authorization for use of funds

In the case of any program authorized by this chapter, if the Secretary determines that such program will be improved by permitting the funds authorized for such program to be used for the acquisition of equipment and the construction of necessary facilities, the Secretary may authorize the use of such funds for such purposes. (West 1996).

appropriate education in the least restrictive environment, IDEA overlaps with Section 504 and Title II in terms of the children it covers. Thus, IDEA may require a school district to modify programs or facilities to achieve these ends for an individual student. IDEA funds may be used for removal of architectural barriers or other improvements to accessibility in order to promote appropriate education for children with disabilities.(Footnotes omitted)¹⁰¹ (emphasis added)

Weber further describes a school's duty under the IDEA to address accessibility concerns in the IEP as "a component of appropriate special education and related services in the least restrictive environment."¹⁰² This discussion makes it clear that when a student's IEP raises concerns of accessibility to the school's campus, the determination of whether these concerns have been met is a necessary component in resolving whether the student has received a FAPE.

The Hearing Examiner tried this controversy on the premise that the entire IDEA statute, including the 1997 amendment, applied to Pace's claims, and no one argued to the contrary. The Hearing Examiner did not require the parties to file extensive pre-trial papers. However, she did require each party to list the issues they wanted the hearing examiner to address. Neither Pace nor the school board asserted that an issue was presented with respect to the expenditure of IDEA funds or any other issue relating to the applicability of the 1997 amendment to § 1404. Considering the strict duty that the ADAAG and UFAS construction guidelines impose on the school, it was also reasonable for the Hearing Examiner to assume that the school board would object if there was some basis for it to argue that these guidelines did not apply to the architectural improvements ordered by Pace's IEP. It is not surprising that Pace did not object to the Hearing Examiner's application of such rigorous standards; it was in his interest at the time to require the school to meet the toughest standards possible in making the architectural improvements.

101. MARK C. WEBER, SPECIAL EDUCATION LAW AND LITIGATION TREATISE 7.1 (2D ED. 2002).

102. Weber, note 3 at 7.2. (Footnotes omitted). Weber concludes that "modifications [to the campus] may include wheelchair ramps, handrails, accessible toilets, and water fountains."

After three hearings, the Hearing Examiner issued her report finding that Bogalusa High had provided Pace with a FAPE. The Hearing Examiner explicitly found that the ADAAG guidelines applied, meaning that she concluded that Pace's accessibility concerns regarding improvements made to the campus triggered the application of the 1997 amendment to § 1404 of the IDEA. Otherwise, the ADAAG guidelines would be irrelevant. In making her findings, the Hearing Examiner relied on the voluminous administrative record, which shows that Bogalusa received substantial federal IDEA funds during 1996 and 1997, the relevant time period.¹⁰³ IDEA regulations make it clear that federal IDEA funds cannot be co-mingled with state funds.¹⁰⁴ The Hearing examiner also had the benefit of Pace's IEP and the testimony of the School Board's Maintenance Supervisor that the construction changes were made in response to Pace's IEP facilitator's instructions. Even if a showing of the use of IDEA funds was required, it was reasonable for the Hearing Examiner to conclude 103. For the 1996-97 fiscal year, the record shows that Bogalusa was the recipient of $164,213 in federal funds for its "Special Education" program.

104. 34 CFR § 300.152.

that IDEA funds were used and that under the amended version of 20 U.S.C. § 1404 the school provided Pace with a FAPE.

Pace appealed the Hearing Examiner's order to the State Level Review Panel (SLRP). Again, the record reflects no argument from any party to that appeal that the entire IDEA statute, including the 1997 amendment to § 1404, did not apply. The SLP in its opinion explicitly applied the 1997 amendment, discussed Pace's arguments, and after rejecting them, affirmed the Hearing Examiner.

Pace then filed suit in federal district court seeking relief under the IDEA, §504 and the ADA. He specifically alleged in his petition that the state received federal IDEA funds.¹⁰⁵ His core claim was that the school had failed to comply with the ADAAG.

The primary evidence Pace presented to the district court was the deposition testimony and report of architect Donald MaGinnis, who testified that the structural changes to the campus failed to meet ADAAG standards. Thus, Pace's federal claim was predicated on these guidelines, made applicable to the IDEA by the 1997 amendment to § 1404. Because the Hearing Examiner and the SLP had rejected Pace's accessibility claims based on application of these same standards (the ADAAG and UFAS), the district court concluded that Pace was precluded from relitigating his accessibility issues.

Suffering summary judgment in the district court on both his IDEA and non-IDEA claims, Pace sought appellate relief from this court. In his initial brief to the panel, Pace argued that the district court erred in accepting the Hearing Examiner and SLP's findings of accessibility to preclude his non-IDEA accessibility claims. However, Pace did not base his argument on the inapplicability of the 1997 amendment to § 1404 or that the Hearing Examiner erred in applying the ADAAG guidelines to the structural changes. The School Board did argue to the panel that the amendment applied and that the Hearing Examiner and SLP had used the very same federal guidelines in deciding Pace's IDEA claims that Pace sought to litigate in his non-IDEA action.¹⁰⁶

105. R. 192.

Faced with the appellee's argument that his non-IDEA claims were precluded due to the previous application of the 1997 amended version of § 1404, Pace filed a reply brief with the panel. Again, he made no effort to refute the School Board's argument that the 1997 amendment to § 1404 applied.

Without any opposition from Pace as to the proper application of § 1404 to the improvements to Bogalusa High's campus, the panel accepted the School Board's unchallenged argument and relied on the 1997 amendment to affirm the district court's judgment.¹⁰⁷ The panel specifically cited the 1997 amended version of § 1404 to support its conclusion that issue preclusion was proper because accessibility to the campus had already been litigated under the same federal standards.¹⁰⁸

In response to the panel's decision, Pace sought en banc review, where he argued for the first time that § 1404 did not apply to the improvements he demanded in his IEP, because "[t]here is no proof that construction in this case would be covered by this provision."¹⁰⁹

106. Appellee Bogalusa City School Board's Brief at 32.

107. Pace v. Bogalusa City School Bd., 325 F.3d 609 (5th Cir. 2003).

108. Id. at 614.

109. Appellant Travis Pace's En Banc Brief at 22.

In sum, we do not read the 1997 amendment to require proof that IDEA funds were used for improvements to trigger the amendment. Even if the statute can be read in this manner, there is evidence to support an inference that IDEA funds were used to make the structural changes. More importantly, we cannot permit Pace to change his position at will. He was obviously happy to have the administrative bodies and the trial court apply the 1997 amendment to § 1404 (and the strict ADAAG guidelines) when it was helpful to him. He cannot at this late date reverse his position when he finds that application of those guidelines are not in his best interest.

Pace has one remaining argument in support of his position that issue preclusion should not apply to his claims under the ADA and § 504. He argues that the IDEA's "savings clause," gives him the right to maintain a cause of action under the ADA and § 504.¹¹⁰ We agree that Pace is not limited to a claim under the IDEA and that he can assert claims under the ADA and § 504. But his ability to assert non-IDEA claims does not mean that general principles of issue preclusion do not apply to preclude his redundant claims.¹¹¹

110. The IDEA's "savings clause" is found in 20 U.S.C. § 1415(1), and provides in pertinent part:

Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to restrict or limit the rights, procedures, and remedies under...the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990...title V of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973...or other Federal laws protecting the rights of children with disabilities...

111. See, e.g., Burlovich v. Bd. of Educ., 208 F.3d 560 (6th Cir. 2000) (issue preclusion may apply to redundant ADA and § 504 claims), Indep. Sch. Dist. No. 283 v. S.D., 88 F.3d 556, 562 (8th Cir. 1996) (principles of issue preclusion and claim preclusion may properly be applied to short-circuited redundant claims under other laws) and Urban v. Jefferson County Sch. Dist. R-1, 89 F.3d 720, 728 (10th Cir. 1996) (issue preclusion proper to dismiss § 504 placement claim when identical issue already litigated under the IDEA).

Because Pace's claims under the ADA and § 504 are factually and legally indistinct from his IDEA claims, issue preclusion is proper in this case.

Because Pace is precluded from litigating the question of whether the defendants have any obligation under the ADA and § 504 to make further architectural or structural changes in the buildings on the Bogalusa campus, his claim for an injunction ordering such changes must also fail.

In conclusion, we AFFIRM the district court's dismissal of Pace's claims under the IDEA and also AFFIRM the district court's dismissal of Pace's claims for damages and injunctive relief under the ADA and § 504.

EDITH H. JONES, Circuit Judge, with whom JOLLY, SMITH, BARKSDALE, GARZA AND DeMOSS, Circuit Judges, join, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

I concur in the court's discussion of the merits of Pace's claims, but I respectfully dissent from the majority's conclusion that the State of Louisiana, by accepting federal education funds from 1996 to 1998 (the period here at issue), validly waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit for violations of § 504 and the IDEA statute. Instead, we should hold that under these limited and unusual circumstances, the State did not knowingly waive its constitutional right to be free from suit by private citizens.¹¹²

Alexander Hamilton wrote:

It is inherent in the nature of sovereignty not to be amenable to the suit of an individual without its consent. This is the general sense and the general practice of mankind; and the exemption, as one of the attributes of sovereignty, is now enjoyed by the government of every state in the Union.

THE FEDERALIST No. 81, at 487-88 (Clint Rossiter ed., 1961). The Eleventh Amendment protects States from suit in federal court precisely out of the recognition of their continued status as co-sovereigns. Puerto Rico Aqueduct & Sewer Auth. v. Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., 506 U.S. 139, 146, 113 S. Ct. 684, 689 (1993). For over one hundred years, the Supreme Court has "extended a State's [constitutional] protection from suit to suits brought by the State's own citizens." Idaho v. Coeur d'Alene Tribe of Idaho, 521 U.S. 261, 267-68, 117 S. Ct. 2028, 2033 (1997) (referring to Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U.S. 1, 10 S. Ct. 504 (1890)).

112. The panel opinion observed that the State's victory in this case would be Pyrrhic because only during a three-year period could the panel conclude that the State did not "knowingly" waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity. The majority apparently believe that a Pyrrhic victory is one too many.

There are two carefully construed exceptions whereby States may become subject to suits by private citizens. Congress may abrogate state sovereign immunity pursuant to § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment, or the State may waive its sovereign immunity and give its consent to suit. See Coll. Say. Bank v. Fla. Prepaid Postsecondary Educ. Expense Bd., 527 U.S. 666, 670, 119 S. Ct. 2219, 2223 (1999)). However, "[b]ecause abrogation of sovereign immunity upsets the fundamental constitutional balance between the Federal Government and the States, and because States are unable directly to remedy a judicial misapprehension of that abrogation, the Court has adopted a particularly strict standard to evaluate claims that Congress has abrogated the States' sovereign immunity." Port Auth. Trans-Hudson Corp. v. Feeney, 495 U.S. 299, 305, 110 S. Ct. 1868, 1872 (1990) (citations and quotations omitted). "Similar solicitude for States' sovereign immunity underlies the standard that this Court employs to determine whether a State has waived that immunity." Id.

Travis Pace advances both abrogation and waiver theories in support of his claims against Louisiana. The majority agrees with Pace that Louisiana waived its sovereign immunity as a condition of accepting federal funds under § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and IDEA. In so doing, the majority has forsaken the "particularly strict standard" the Eleventh Amendment demands, ignored the Supreme Court's settled test for evaluating a waiver of constitutional rights, and inexplicably discounted the unique factual context from which this case arose.

I. WAIVER

As a fundamental constitutional component, "[s]tate sovereign immunity, no less than the right to trial by jury in criminal cases, is constitutionally protected." Coll. Say. Bank, 527 U.S. at 682, 119 S. Ct. at 2229. The same test used in evaluating waiver of other fundamental constitutional rights must be employed in the Eleventh Amendment context as well. As the Court held, there is no justification for creating a separate and distinct test for Eleventh Amendment waiver purposes. Thus, "[t]he classic description of an effective waiver of a constitutional right is the intentional relinquishment or abandonment of a known right or privilege." Id. (citations and quotations omitted) (emphasis added). According to the sole applicable test, therefore, "waiver must have been made with a full awareness of both the nature of the right being abandoned and the consequences of the decision to abandon it." Moran v. Burbine, 475 U.S. 412, 421, 106 S. Ct. 1135, 1141 (1986) (emphasis added). Moreover, "courts indulge every reasonable presumption against waiver of fundamental constitutional rights and do not presume acquiescence in the loss of fundamental rights." Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 464, 58 S. Ct. 1019, 1023 (1938). This circuit, at least until today, adhered to this uniform approach. "Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences[.]" United States v. Newell, 315 F.3d 510, 519 (5th Cir. 2002) (quoting Brady v. United States, 397 U.S. 742, 748, 90 S. Ct. 1463 (1970)) (emphasis added). A valid waiver requires "actual knowledge of the existence of the right or privilege, full understanding of its meaning, and clear comprehension of the consequences of the waiver." Id. (quoting Hatfield v. Scott, 306 F.3d 223, 230 (5th Cir. 2002)) (emphasis in original).

The test for a State's waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity is no different because Congress sought to effect waiver under the Spending Clause. The Supreme Court "has repeatedly characterized . . . Spending Clause legislation as 'much in the nature of a contract: in return for federal funds, the [recipients] agree to comply with federally imposed conditions.""Barnes v. Gorman, 536 U.S. 181, 186 (2002) (quoting Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman, 451 U.S. 1, 17 (1981)). "Just as a valid contract requires offer and acceptance of its terms, the legitimacy of Congress' power to legislate under the spending power . . rests on whether the [recipient] voluntarily and knowingly accepts the terms of the contract." Barnes, 536 U.S. at 186 (citations and quotations omitted) (emphasis added); see also Pennhurst, 465 U.S. at 99, 104 S. Ct. at 907 (the State's consent to suit must be "unequivocally expressed"). As a result, the "test for determining whether a State has waived its immunity from federal-court jurisdiction is a stringent one." Atascadero State Hosp. v. Scanlon, 473 U.S. 234, 241, 105 S. Ct. 3142, 3146 (1985).

Despite this clear authority, the majority has crafted a novel waiver test for Spending Clause cases. Relying on South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203, 107 S. Ct. 2793 (1987), the majority draws two conclusions: (1) a State's waiver is knowing so long as Congress satisfies the "clear statement rule," and (2) the State's waiver is voluntary so long as it is "non-coercive." Although I agree with the latter conclusion, the former is incorrect.¹¹³

113. Dole's "non-coercive" requirement is a satisfactory proxy for the "voluntariness" prong of the waiver inquiry. Thus, under the current state of the law, § 2000d-7(a) is not unconstitutionally coercive. As a result, the State of Louisiana acted voluntarily for purposes of the constitutional waiver test. But, with due regard for precedent, I am compelled to raise the following question: "If not now, and on this showing, when, and on what showing" will federal grants be deemed unconstitutionally coercive? Cf. Spangler v. Pasadena City Bd. of Ed., 611 F.2d 1239, 1240 (9th Cir. 1979). The Rehabilitation Act, pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 794(a), requires non-consenting States to forfeit all federal funds. For the Louisiana Department of Education, renouncing all federal funds would cut its budget by $804,269,621, or 75%. Dole counseled that "in some circumstances the financial inducement offered

College Savings Bank controls the Eleventh Amendment waiver inquiry and demands more than a congressional "clear statement" – it also requires the State to make a "clear declaration" of its intent to waive its immunity. In College Savings Bank, the Supreme Court recognized that for a State "knowingly" to waive its sovereign immunity, not only must Congress make clear its intention to so condition federal funds, but the State must expressly and unequivocally waive its immunity. "There is a fundamental difference between a State's expressing unequivocally that it waives its immunity and Congress's expressing unequivocally its intention that if the State takes certain action it shall be deemed to have that immunity." Coll. Sav. Bank, 527 U.S. at 680-81, 119 S. Ct. at 2228. "In the latter situation, the most that can be said with certainty is that the State has been put on notice that Congress intends to subject it to suits brought by individuals." Id.

Despite the majority's assertion to the contrary, College Savings Bank confirms that Dole's "clear statement" requirement is only half of the waiver equation. See Garcia v. S.U.N.Y. Health Sci.Ctr. of Brooklyn, 280 F.3d 98, 113-14 (2d Cir. 2001) (concluding that "a clear expression of Congress's intent alone is not sufficient . . . to find that [the State] actually waived its sovereign immunity by accepting federal funds"). "The whole point of requiring a 'clear declaration' by the State of its waiver is to be certain that the State in fact consents to suit." Coll. Sav. Bank, 527 U.S. at 680, 119 S. Ct. at 2228 (emphasis in original). "Whether by Congress might be so coercive as to pass the point at which pressure turns into compulsion." 483 U.S. at 211 (emphasis added). To date, the Supreme Court has not found a case that warranted vindication of this principle. Nevertheless, Louisiana and its children would suffer extreme consequences here if the State were to lose massive federal assistance by asserting its constitutional right to sovereign immunity.

Congress clearly required that a State waive its immunity before accepting federal funds (the first inquiry) is not the same thing, however, as whether the State clearly declared its knowing waiver (the second inquiry)." Douglas v. Cal. Dep't of Youth Auth., 285 F.3d 1226, 1228 (O'Scannlain, J., dissenting from denial of petition for rehearing en banc) (emphasis in original). " The mere receipt of federal funds cannot establish that a State has consented to suit in federal court." Atascadero, 473 U.S. at 246-47.¹¹⁴

For a State to evince its "clear declaration" of intent to waive sovereign immunity, it must possess "actual knowledge of the existence of the right or privilege, full understanding of its meaning, and clear comprehension of the consequences of the waiver." Newell, 315 F.3d at 519 (citations and quotations omitted) (emphasis in original). In all but the rarest of circumstances, acceptance of federal funds offered in accordance with the "clear statement rule" will meet this test. This case represents an exception to the general rule.

The majority ignores the fact that until the mid-1990's, it was assumed that Congress could abrogate state sovereign immunity in legislation enacted pursuant to its Article I enumerated powers. The Supreme Court held otherwise in Seminole Tribe v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44, 72-73, 116 S. Ct. 1114 (1996), while reaffirming that abrogation remained permissible through a proper exercise of power under § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Id. at 59, 116 S. Ct. 1114. In the statutes here at issue — ADA, § 504 and IDEA — abrogation was enacted under the Commerce Clause. Since, 114. Furthermore, the majority's reliance on the precedents of other circuits is unpersuasive. Those circuits, like our court today, focused exclusively on whether Congress clearly expressed its intention to condition acceptance of federal funds on waiver of immunity—not whether the State reasonably believed it was waiving immunity by accepting federal funds.

however, all three statutes enhance the rights of the disabled, and all three express a clear congressional intent to abridge the States' Eleventh Amendment immunity, federal courts routinely permitted suits by private individuals to proceed against the States. As late as 1998, while applying the Supreme Court's narrow construction of the § 5 abrogation authority,¹¹⁵ this court still held that the ADA validly abrogated state sovereign immunity. Coolbaugh v. Louisiana, 136 F.3d 430 (5th Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 819, 119 S. Ct. 58 (1998) overruled by Reickenbacker v. Flores, 274 F.3d 974 (5th Cir. 2001).¹¹⁶

Surely Louisiana should not be penalized for construing the ADA — and counterpart abrogation language in § 504 and IDEA just as this court subsequently did in Coolbaugh. Instead, the State acted quite rationally in assuming between 1996 and 1998 that it had no sovereign immunity to waive when it accepted federal education funds under conditions specified by § 504 and IDEA. The State voluntarily accepted federal funds, but its acceptance was not a "knowing" waiver of immunity. As the Second Circuit put it, since "the prescriptions of Title II [of the ADA] and § 504 are virtually identical, a State accepting federal funds could not have understood that in doing so it was actually abandoning its sovereign 115. See City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 117 S. Ct. 2157 (1997).

116. Reickenbacker's holding flows from the Supreme Court's decision in Bd. of Trustees of the Univ. of Alabama v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356, 368, 121 S. Ct. 955, 964 (2001), which held that Title I of the ADA did not validly abrogate state sovereign immunity pursuant to § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Because Title II of the ADA and § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act offer virtually identical protections, the abrogation analysis with regard to the two statutes is the same. Reickenbacker, 274 F.3d at 977 n. 17; see also Garcia, 280 F.3d at 114; Hoekstra v. Indep. Sch. Dist., 103 F.3d 624, 626 (8th Cir. 1996).

immunity from private damage suits, since by all reasonable appearances state sovereign immunity had already been lost."
Garcia, 280 F.3d at 114(citations omitted).¹¹⁷

The majority offers two principal arguments against this result. First, the majority conflates abrogation and waiver when positing that "Louisiana did have Eleventh Amendment immunity to waive by accepting the clearly conditioned federal funds." See Majority Op. at 21 (emphasis in original). On the contrary, Coolbaugh confirmed, until Garrett and Reickenbacker overruled it, that Congress had validly exercised its abrogation authority, rendering Louisiana amenable to suit notwithstanding the Eleventh Amendment. The majority's suggestion that Congress can abrogate sovereign immunity, but still permit the States to retain their Eleventh Amendment immunity, misapprehends the import of abrogation.¹¹⁸

117. Conversely, after Garrett was decided, the State defendants could knowingly waive their immunity because they could have reasonably anticipated the ability to preserve sovereign immunity by declining federal funds under the Rehabilitation Act and the IDEA. See Bd. of Trustees of the Univ. of Alabama v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356, 121 S. Ct. 955 (2001) (invalidating an abrogation of Eleventh Amendment immunity pursuant to Title I of ADA).

118. The unmistakable difference between abrogation and waiver is complicated by statutes, like § 2000d-7(a), that attempt to achieve both in the same provision. Nevertheless, the circuit courts and the panel opinion here agree that statutory language may, in fact, constitute both an attempted abrogation and conditional waiver provision. See, e.g., Stanley v. Litscher, 213 F.3d 340, 344 (7th Cir. 2000); Robinson v. Kansas, 295 F.3d 1183, 1189-90 (10th Cir. 2002). However, a statute's capacity to serve dual purposes does not justify the majority's confusion of the two concepts.

Still, Congress may, in its discretion, choose to trigger enforcement of any federal statute, even after it has abrogated sovereign immunity, on the receipt of federal funds. In response, a State, by refusing federal funds, may reject the terms of the "contract" and potentially avoid statutory liability to private individuals. But whether it can avoid liability based upon a contractual/waiver theory is a different question from whether it retained Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity post-abrogation.¹¹⁹ Thus, the relevant Eleventh Amendment inquiry remains whether Louisiana reasonably believed, based on objective evidence, that the Rehabilitation Act and the IDEA validly abrogated its sovereign immunity — not whether it could have chosen to reject the federal funds anyway.

Second, the majority contends that requiring the State to make a "clear declaration" problematically "engraft [s] a subjective-intent element onto an otherwise objective Spending Clause waiver inquiry." See Majority Op. at 22. Unfortunately, the majority misunderstands the nature of the "clear declaration" requirement, a requirement consonant with the Supreme Court's longstanding objective approach to waiver. The Supreme Court uniformly applies a "totality of the circumstances" test to waiver questions involving fundamental constitutional rights. Fare v. Michael C., 442 U.S. 707, 725, 99 S. Ct. 2560, 2572 (1979) "Only if the totality of the circumstances reveal both an uncoerced choice and the requisite level of comprehension may a court properly conclude that the . . rights have been waived." See Burbine, 475 U.S. at 421, 106 S. Ct. at 1135. Hence, the Supreme Court considers a variety of objective factors, not subjective intent, to determine whether a constitutional right has validly been waived. Fare, 442 U.S. at 725, 99 S. Ct. at 2572; see also United States v. Sonderup, 639 F.2d 294, 298 (5th Cir. 1981) (relying on the objective indicia to determine whether a voluntary, knowing and intelligent waiver was made). College Savings Bank's "clear declaration" requirement reiterates the Supreme Court's waiver test in the Eleventh Amendment context, and so would I.¹²⁰

119. The majority implies that Louisiana's self-interested acceptance of funds should prevent the State from arguing that it might have chosen to forego the funds for the sake of maintaining sovereign immunity. Louisiana's mistaken (though eminently reasonable) belief that abrogation had occurred distorted this calculation, however. That the State does have immunity to waive now throws into high relief the potential coercion inherent in the federal government's funding condition. The "cost" of Louisiana's resting on its constitutional right is over $800 million annually!

Given this court's ruling in Coolbaugh that the State had no immunity to waive, followed by an unsuccessful en banc poll and the Supreme Court's denial of certiorari in that case, it is inconceivable that Louisiana somehow, based on the "straightforward objective facts," knowingly chose to waive a right that was non-existent when it acted. In a sense, the State of Louisiana is being forced, by today's majority, to bear the burden of this court's mistake of law in Coolbaugh. Consider this analogy:

120. The majority's approach unquestionably achieves a bright-line rule that the Supreme Court's traditional waiver inquiry cannot. However, this approach is impermissible in the context of waiver of fundamental constitutional rights.

An express written statement of waiver of the right to remain silent or the right to counsel is usually strong proof of the validity of that waiver, but it is not inevitably either necessary or sufficient to establish waiver. The question is not one of form, but rather whether the defendant in fact knowingly and voluntarily waived the rights delineated in the Miranda case.

North Carolina v. Butler, 441 U.S. 369, 374, 99 S. Ct. 1755, 1758 (1979).

the police instruct a criminal defendant, "for his own good," to sign a waiver of counsel form, while telling him that the waiver is "meaningless, because you have no counsel rights to waive." Who would argue that the waiver is knowing, especially if the police showed him a court decision confirming this view? That the dupe is an individual defendant rather than the State does not, per College Savings, make this a different case, nor does the fact that the waiver falls under the Spending Clause rather than some other type of enactment. The majority's opinion violates College Savings Bank.

In this rare instance, Louisiana could not have knowingly waived its sovereign immunity in the relevant time period before the Garrett decision. The majority's approach strangely counsels States to disregard governing caselaw when Supreme Court doctrine is evolving. Such an argument makes no more sense in this unusual context than it would in any other.

II. ABROGATION

Pace alternatively argues, and this dissent must determine, whether Congress abrogated Louisiana's sovereign immunity with respect to claims brought under Title II, § 504, and the IDEA. Pace would extend the Court's recent decision in Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509, 124 S. Ct. 1978 (2004), which held that Title II of the ADA validly abrogates State sovereign immunity insofar as it implicates the physical accessibility of the fundamental constitutional right of access to the courts. The majority here, having found a waiver of the State's immunity, declares it unnecessary to opine on abrogation. The majority goes on, however, to observe that, in Lane, the Supreme Court "refused to consider [whether Title II abrogates] other rights, including those considered to be fundamental under the Constitution." See Majority Op. at 28, citing 124 S. Ct. at 1993. The majority also comments that the Court " has never before recognized access to public education or freedom from disability discrimination in education as fundamental rights." Id., citing Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 221, 223, 102 S. Ct. 2382, 2396-98 (1982); City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 446, 105 S. Ct. 3249, 3257 (1985).

I agree with the majority's dicta that suggests Lane is currently of limited application. Moreover, because Lane was written very narrowly, I conclude that this court's decision in Reickenbacker remains valid in holding that ADA Title II, apart from the Lane scenario, does not validly abrogate States' Eleventh Amendment immunity. See Reickenbacker, 274 F.3d at 983. The fate of § 504 abrogation was also sealed in Reickenbacker based on the court's conclusion that Title II and § 504 impose "virtually identical" obligations. Id. For the reasons stated in Reickenbacker and in the panel opinion, I would hold that Congress could not constitutionally abrogate state sovereign immunity in § 504 or the similarly structured IDEA statute pursuant to § 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. The remedies imposed by those laws "far exceed [] [those] imposed by the Constitution, and [I] cannot conclude that they are congruent and proportional to the legislative findings of unconstitutional discrimination against the disabled by the states." Reickenbacker, 274 F.3d at 983.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, I conclude that during a narrow period of time, based on uncertainty in the Supreme Court's evolving Eleventh Amendment doctrine, the State of Louisiana did not knowingly waive its Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity when it accepted federal funds under § 2000d-7(a).

I respectfully dissent.

United States Court of Appeals
Fifth Circuit
FILED
August 15, 2005
Charles R. Fulbruge III
Clerk

REVISED OCTOBER 27, 2005

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
For the Fifth Circuit

No. 02-10190

LUCINDA G. MILLER; ELAINE KING-MILLER, Plaintiffs-Appellees,

VERSUS

TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY HEALTH SCIENCES CENTER, ET AL
Defendants-Appellants.

Appeal from the United States District Court
For the Northern District of Texas

Consolidated with
No. 02-30318
No. 02-30369

THEODORE JOHNSON,

Plaintiff-Appellee

VERSUS

LOUISIANA DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ET AL

Defendants

LOUISIANA DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION; STATE OF
LOUISIANA; PRESIDENT OF LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY SYSTEM; BOARD OF REGENTS

Defendants-Appellants,

and

LYNN AUGUST

Plaintiff-Appellee

VERSUS

SUZANNE MITCHELL, ET AL

Defendants-Appellants

Appeals from the United States District Court
For the Eastern District of Louisiana

Before KING, Chief Judge and JOLLY, HIGGINBOTHAM, DAVIS, JONES, SMITH, WIENER, BARKSDALE, GARZA, DeMOSS, BENAVIDES, STEWART, DENNIS, CLEMENT, and PRADO, Circuit Judges.*

DAVIS AND WIENER, Circuit Judges:

This consolidated appeal presents the same issue we recently resolved en banc in Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board:¹ Does a state waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court under § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973² when it accepts federal funds that are granted by Congress under authority of the Constitution's Spending Clause and expressly conditioned on waiver of immunity from § 504? For reasons that follow, we find no merit in appellants' arguments and reaffirm our conclusions in Pace that acceptance of such federal funds operates to waive a State's Eleventh Amendment immunity under the express conditions of 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7.³

*Judge Owen was not a member of the court when this case was submitted to the court en banc and did not participate in this decision.

1. 403 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005) (en banc).
2. 29 U.S.C. § 794.
3. The factual and legal background of this consolidated appeal is accurately and succinctly presented in the panel opinions:

A. Johnson/August v. Louisiana Dep't of Education, 330 F.3d 362, 363-64 (5th Cir. 2003).

Appellee Johnson was a full time student at the University of New Orleans ("UNO") on financial aid. He is disabled by a partial paralysis of his left foot. In February 2000, a medical emergency caused Johnson to withdraw from UNO. Four months later, UNO revoked Johnson's eligibility for financial aid. Johnson successfully appealed the decision. The appeals committee, however, did not inform Johnson of its decision until after the fall 2000 semester had begun; the committee also imposed academic requirements to maintain his eligibility for financial aid. Johnson asserts that because of his late start in fall semester classes, he was unable to comply with the academic requirements. In January 2001, UNO denied Johnson financial aid for the spring semester. Johnson filed suit against the Louisiana Department of Education, the State of Louisiana, the President of the Louisiana State University System, the Louisiana Board of Regents, and UNO under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act, and § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, alleging discrimination against disabled students and failure to provide reasonable accommodations.

[Lynn] August, a blind man, worked as a computer instructor for the Louisiana Department of Social Services ("DSS"). In June 2000, DSS eliminated August's teaching duties, averring that August failed to submit "manual materials" required for use in the computer course. August contended...that he submitted the necessary material at the same time as a sighted instructor whose materials were approved. August brought various claims for damages against the DSS and the three state employees in their official capacities, including claims under the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act (§ 504).

I. BACKGROUND

Louisiana's Department of Education ("LADOE") and Department of Social Services ("DSS")⁴ and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center ("TTUHSC") (collectively "defendants") appeal rulings of the district courts, which held that, by accepting federal funds offered on explicit conditions of waiver, defendants Separate district courts in the Eastern District of Louisiana dismissed all claims against the defendants based on state sovereign immunity except for those under § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. The defendants appeal, arguing that state sovereign immunity bars the appellees' § 504 claims.

- B. Miller v. Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, 330 F.3d 691, 691 (5th Cir. 2003).

King-Miller began working as an administrator and professor at [Texas] Tech in 1997. She notified Tech that she suffered from a degenerative eye condition in August 1998; she was diagnosed as legally blind in 1999. In 2000, she sued Tech for allegedly failing to accommodate her disability in violation of § 504, which prohibits discrimination against the disabled by programs receiving federal funds.

...Tech moved to dismiss on the basis of state sovereign immunity. The district court denied the motion, and Tech took this interlocutory appeal.

4. The case before the panel in Johnson was a consolidated appeal by LADOE and the Department of Social Services for the State of Louisiana ("DSS"). LADOE and DSS consolidated their arguments into one brief for this rehearing en banc, and therefore all arguments accredited to LADOE are also made on behalf of DSS.

in fact waived their right to Eleventh Amendment⁵ immunity pursuant to 46 U.S.C. § 2000d-7,⁶ and were therefore amenable to suit in federal court for § 504 violations. Later, a panel of this court in Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board⁷ ("Pace I") held that, despite the express provision in the grant that entitlement of the grantee to accept the funds was conditioned on such a waiver, a State did not waive Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit under § 504 by accepting federal funds at a time when, based on the then-current state of the pertinent case law, the State had reason to believe that it had no such immunity to waive. Two panels of this court, relying on Pace I, reversed the district courts' denials of Eleventh Amendment Immunity and dismissed the plaintiffs' claims under § 504.⁸

5. The Eleventh Amendment to the United States Constitution states:

The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State.

6. Section 2000d-7 (a)(1) provides in pertinent part:

A State shall not be immune under the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973...or the provisions of any other Federal statute prohibiting discrimination by recipients of Federal financial assistance.

7. 325 F.3d 609 (5th Cir. 2003).

8. See Miller v. Tex. Tech Univ. Health Sci. Ctr., 330 F.3d 691 (5th Cir. 2003); Johnson v. La. Dept. of Educ., 330 F.3d 362 (5th Cir. 2003).

We later reheard Pace en banc and held that, then as now, a State did waive Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit under § 504 by accepting federal funds under such circumstances ("Pace II").⁹ Prior to rehearing Pace en banc, we had agreed to rehear the instant cases en banc, but postponed rehearing them pending our decision in Pace II.

After Pace II was announced, we asked the parties in these cases to submit supplemental briefs explaining which of their arguments regarding Eleventh Amendment immunity from suits under § 504 remained viable and which had been foreclosed. In response, the defendants conceded that Pace II forecloses all their arguments except three.

First, both LADOE and TTUHSC contend that no valid waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity occurred because, even though they received federal funds, none of the state agencies was expressly authorized by state law to waive its respective state's immunity from suit under § 504. Second, TTUHSC contends that Pace II did not address the issue whether § 504 and § 2000d-7 place conditions on federal funds that are not reasonably related to the purpose of the expenditure, which is part of the test for valid Spending Clause legislation set forth by the Supreme Court in South Dakota v. Dole.¹⁰ Third, LADOE asserts that it did not "knowingly waive" Eleventh Amendment immunity under § 2000d-7 by accepting federal funds, contending that this argument, although rejected in Pace II, should be reexamined in light of the Supreme Court's subsequent decision in Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education.¹¹

9. 403 F.3d 272.

10. 483 U.S. 203, 207 (1987).

11. ___ U.S. ___, 125 S. Ct. 1497 (2005).

II. STATE IMMUNITY UNDER THE ELEVENTH AMENDMENT

A. Express Authority to Waive Immunity

We consider first defendants' argument that they did not waive their states' Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit under § 504 because they lacked express authorization to do so under state law. Defendants do not challenge that they were authorized under state law to accept federal funds or that each received federal funds.¹²

12. LADOE is authorized to accept federal funds pursuant to LA.REV. STAT. ANN. § 17:24(C), which provides in pertinent part:

The board [LADEOE] is hereby designated as the State Agency with respect to federal funds for those programs under the jurisdiction of the board. The State Department of Education shall administer and distribute all federal funds received for the benefit of those phases of education under the jurisdiction of the board. (emphasis added).

Similarly, LA. REV. STAT. ANN. § 46:51(6) provides that the Department of Social Services of Louisiana [DSS] may " [a]ct as the agent of the state to cooperate with the federal government...and in the administration of federal funds granted in the state to aid in the furtherance of any functions of the department, and be empowered to meet such federal standards as may be established for the administration of such federal funds." (emphasis added).

Likewise, TEX. EDUC. CODE. ANN. § 110.08, which governs the funding of TTUHSC, provides in pertinent part, "The board [of TTUHSC], in its discretion, may accept and administer grants and gifts from the federal government...for the use and benefit of the Health Sciences Center."

Defendants insist, however, that as state agencies, their authority to accept federal funds is insufficient to waive Eleventh Amendment immunity, which, they argue, cannot be validly waived without express statutory authority.

Defendants' argument fails to recognize that grant programs based on the Spending Clause are to be interpreted under ordinary contractual principles.¹³ In these cases, the defendants were authorized by the State to accept the benefits of substantial sums of federal Spending Clause money burdened with the clearly stated condition under § 2000d-7 that acceptance waives immunity from suit in federal court. The statutory powers of attorney provided to defendants by their respective state legislatures to accept, administer, and expend such federal funds necessarily includes the authorization to accept the conditions that come along with those funds. Clothed with this authority, the defendants held themselves out to have authority from their states to comply with the conditions imposed by Congress in the statute. These conditions are inseparable from the offer of the funds: The States (or their authorized agencies) may reject the condition of waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity by rejecting the funds, or they may accept the funds and the conditions; they cannot, however, accept the benefits of the funds and reject the inextricably intertwined condition of waiver by claiming post hoc that the delegation of authority to accept the funds did not carry with it the authority to waive immunity. This is hornbook contract and agency law.

Therefore, we reject defendants' argument that they retain Eleventh Amendment immunity because they lacked express 13. Barnes v. Gorman, 536 U.S. 181, 186 (2002).

statutory authority to waive their states' Eleventh Amendment immunity.¹⁴

B. Relatedness

We next address TTUHSC's argument that § 504 and § 2000d-7 are unconstitutional Spending Clause legislation because they place conditions on federal grants that are not reasonably related to the purpose of the expenditure. This is often referred to as the "relatedness" prong of the Dole test for valid Spending Clause legislation.¹⁵ According to TTUHSC, they are not governed by § 504 because none of the federal funds they received were earmarked for § 504 goals of preventing disability discrimination or accommodating disability. TTUHSC urges that, if we determine that the immunity waiver condition imposed by § 504 is not limited to Rehabilitation Act funding but that they accompany all federal funding, we should hold that § 504 fails the "relatedness" prong of the Dole test.

TTUHSC failed to raise this argument in its briefs before either the district court or the original panel of this court. Neither did it argue the point in its original en banc brief. In Pace II, we concluded that the state defendant had waived this "relatedness" argument because it failed to argue the point before the original panel and did not argue it in its en banc brief beyond a bare 14. This disposition makes it unnecessary for us to consider what effect the Supreme Court's decision in Lapides v. Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia, 535 U.S. 613 (2002), has on this issue.

15. Under Dole, conditions attached to Spending Clause legislation are valid only if they are (a) attached to expenditures that benefit the general welfare; (b) unambiguous; (c) reasonably related to the purpose of the expenditure to which they are attached; and (d) not in violation of an independent constitutional provision. 483 U.S. at 207-08.

assertion.¹⁶ The maxim is well established in this circuit that a party who fails to make an argument before either the district court or the original panel waives it for purposes of en banc consideration.¹⁷

If we are required to address this argument because it relates to Eleventh Amendment immunity, and as such may be a "jurisdictional" defense that cannot be waived,¹⁸ we reject it. We agree with the four circuit courts that have addressed this issue and concluded that, if the involved state agency or department accepts federal financial assistance, it waives its Eleventh Amendment immunity even though the federal funds are not earmarked for programs that further the anti-discrimination and rehabilitation

16. 403 F.3d at 281 n .32.

17. See Communication Workers of America v. Ector County, 392 F.3d 733, 748 (5th Cir. 2004) (failure to brief an issue constitutes waiver on appeal); Proctor & Gamble Co. v. Amway Corp., 376 F.3d 496, 499 (5th Cir. 2004) (party waived argument not included in original brief to panel); Cooper Ind. v. Tarmac Roofing, Inc., 276 F.3d 704, 711 (5th Cir. 2002) (argument not raised before original panel waived); and Lowry v. Bankers Life and Cas. Retirement Plan, 871 F.2d 522, 525 (5th Cir. 1989) (refusing to consider an argument raised for the first time in a petition for rehearing). See also FED. R. APP. P. 28 (a) (9) (A) (stating that an appellant's brief must contain "appellant's contentions and the reasons for them, with citations to the authorities and parts of the record on which the appellant relies.").

18. See Edelman v. Jordan, 415 U.S. 651, 677-78 (1974) (because defense of Eleventh Amendment immunity is a jurisdictional bar to the plaintiff's suit, court of appeal did not err in considering defense when it was not argued before the district court).

goals of § 504.¹⁹ Chief Judge Scirica's persuasive opinion for the Third Circuit in Koslow is particularly helpful in explaining this point.

In that case, the State of Pennsylvania received federal financial assistance for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, established to alleviate costs states incur in imprisoning illegal aliens who commit state offenses.²⁰ The state furnished these funds to the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections.²¹ The plaintiff, Mr. Koslow, was employed by the Department of Corrections as a supervisor at the prison's water treatment plant and brought a § 504 suit against his employer for failing to accommodate his disability following a work related injury.²²

The state defendants argued that the federal government's interest in the federally funded program was too attenuated from the general waiver of immunity set forth in § 2000d-7 respecting claims under § 504. The Koslow court disagreed and concluded that receipt of federal funding by an agency operated as a waiver of that agency's Eleventh Amendment immunity even though the funds are not earmarked for § 504 purposes. The court gave three reasons for its conclusion. First, the panel found that:

19. See Barbour v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, 374 F.3d 1161(D.C. Cir. 2004); Lovell v. Chandler, 303 F.3d 1039 (9th Cir. 2002); Koslow v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 302 F.3d 161 (3d Cir. 2002); Jim C. V. United States, Atkins School District, 235 F.3d 1079 (8th Cir. 2000) (en banc).

20. Koslow, 302 F.3d at 166-67.

21. Id. at 167.

22. Id. at 165.

[t]hrough the Rehabilitation Act [§ 504], Congress has expressed a clear interest in eliminating disability-based discrimination in state departments or agencies. That interest, which is undeniably significant and clearly reflected in the legislative history, flows with every dollar spent by a department or agency receiving federal funds. The waiver of the Commonwealth's immunity from Rehabilitation Act claims by Department of Corrections employees furthers that interest directly.²³

Second, § 2000d-7 limits the waiver to the agency or department that receives federal funds and does not require waiver by other agencies or the state as a whole.²⁴ The court concluded that "[t]his limitation helps ensure the waiver accords with the 'relatedness' requirement articulated in Dole.²⁵

Finally, the court observed that, as a practical matter, § 504 funds received by specific state departments or agencies are frequently not tracked, making it virtually impossible to determine how the agency spent the federal dollars and whether the federal funds paid for the affected employee's salary or benefits.²⁶

For the same reasons articulated in Koslow, we reject the TTUHSC's argument that the substantial federal financial assistance for education it received is unrelated to the goals of § 504 and therefore fails Dole's "relatedness" requirement.

C. Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education

23. Id. at 175-76 (internal citation omitted).

24. Id. at 176.

25. Id.

26. Id.

Finally, LADOE argues that it did not "knowingly" waive Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court under § 504 in accordance with § 2000d-7 by accepting federal funds. As LADOE acknowledges, this argument was considered and rejected by our en banc majority in Pace II.²⁷ LADOE nevertheless argues that the Supreme Court's decision in Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education,²⁸ requires us to re-examine the issue, repudiate the reasoning of Pace II, and adopt the analysis of Pace I. In Pace I, the panel held that the state defendant did not "knowingly" waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity by accepting federal funds because, at the time it received those funds, the prevailing legal authorities suggested that it had no Eleventh Amendment immunity from suits under § 504.²⁹

In rejecting the Pace I panel's syllogism, the en banc court in Pace II held that, in accordance with Pennhurst State School & Hospital v. Halderman,³⁰ "the only 'knowledge' that the Court is concerned about is a state's knowledge that a Spending Clause condition requires waiver of immunity, not a state's knowledge that it has immunity that it could assert."³¹ We also stated in Pace II that, "[a]t bottom...if Congress satisfies the clear statement rule, the knowledge prong of the Spending Clause waiver analysis is

27. 403 F.3d at 282-85.

28. ___ U.S. ___, 125 S. Ct. 1497 (2005).

29. 325 F.3d at 617.

30. 451 U.S. 1 (1981).

31. 403 F.3d at 279 (emphasis in original); see also Dole, 483 U.S. at 207 (quoting Pennhurst).

fulfilled.³² Finding that § 504 and § 2000d-7 clearly and unambiguously conditioned the receipt of § 504 funds on waiver of a State's Eleventh Amendment immunity from suits grounded in § 504, we held that the State had "knowingly waived" immunity from suits under § 504.³³

LADOE does not argue that § 504 and § 2000d-7 fail the "clear statement rule" of Pace II; rather LADOE contends that in Jackson (decided after Pace II), the Supreme Court repudiated this "clear statement rule" and replaced it with a "notice" rule. In Jackson, the male coach of a high school's girls basketball team asserted a retaliation claim against the local school board, grounding his claim in Title IX. The school board argued that, because retaliation claims are not expressly authorized by the language of Title IX, it was not put on notice of the potential for retaliation claims under the statute.³⁴

The Supreme Court agreed that, because Title IX was passed pursuant to the Spending Clause, "private damage actions are available only where recipients of federal funding had adequate notice that they could be liable for the conduct at issue."³⁵ Consonant with its holding in Pennhurst, the Court reiterated its position that a State must be aware of the conditions imposed on receipt of federal funds for there to be "knowing acceptance" of those conditions.³⁶ Acknowledging that Title IX is silent on the 32. 403 F.3d at 279.

33. Id. at 282-85.

34. 125 S. Ct. at 1508-09.

35. Id. (internal citation omitted).

36. Id. at 1509 (quoting Pennhurst, 451 U.S. at 17).

question of the fund recipient's amenability to retaliation suits, the Court looked to its prior decisions dealing with the scope of remedies available under Title IX and concluded (in the absence of a "clear statement") that the school board nevertheless had sufficient "notice" because:

[T]he Board should have been put on notice by the fact that our cases since Cannon [v. University of Chicago, 441 U.S. 677 (1979)], such as Gebser [v. Lago Vista Independent School Dist., 524 U.S. 274 (1998)] and Davis [v. Monroe County Bd. of Ed., 526 U.S. 629 (1999)], have consistently interpreted Title IX's private cause of action broadly to encompass diverse forms of intentional sex discrimination.³⁷

LADOE would have us read Jackson as the Court's abandoning of College Savings Bank's "clear statement rule" that we applied in Pace II, and replacing it with a "notice" test of what the recipients of the funds should have known at the time the funds were accepted. We cannot read such a sweeping change into the court's opinion in Jackson. Title IX, the statute at issue in Jackson, is silent (or at least ambiguous) regarding retaliation; in contrast, the Spending Clause statutes we addressed in Pace II were clear and unambiguous regarding waiver: Section 2000d-7 expressly and unambiguously states that parties waive their Eleventh Amendment immunity to actions under § 504 by accepting federal funds. Moreover, there is no language in Jackson that can be pointed to in support of a conclusion that the Court desired to modify, much less repudiate, the well-established rule with such along and distinguished history laid out in Pennhurst, Dole, and College Savings Bank that "if Congress intends to impose a condition on the grant of federal moneys, it must do so unambiguously," and "speak with a clear voice."³⁸ Stated differently, nothing in Jackson undermines Pace II's holding that a clear statement like the one found in § 2000d-7 is sufficient to satisfy the "knowing" requirement for a waiver to be valid." Even if Jackson can be interpreted as standing for the proposition that a clear and unambiguous statement from Congress is not the exclusive road to a "knowing waiver," it cannot be read to call into question the holding in Pace II that the presence of a clear statement is sufficient to satisfy the need for a waiver to be "knowing." Accordingly, LADOE's Jackson argument in this regard fails.

37. Id.

III. CONCLUSION

We hold that LADOE, DSS, and TTUHSC are not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in these consolidated cases. We therefore affirm the district courts' denials of defendants' motions to dismiss plaintiffs' claims under § 504 on the basis of such immunity, and we remand the cases to the district courts from whence they came for further proceedings.

AFFIRMED AND REMANDED.

38. Pennhurst, 451 U.S. at 17 (citations omitted); see also Dole, 483 U.S. at 207.

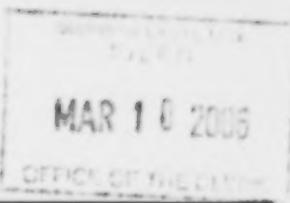

EDITH H. JONES, Circuit Judge, joined by JOLLY, SMITH, GARZA, DeMOSS and CLEMENT, Circuit Judges, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

The en banc decision in Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board, 403 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005), held that a state voluntarily and knowingly waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity, as a matter of federal law, from suits for damages in federal court by accepting federal Rehabilitation Act funds made subject to 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-7. We adhere to the arguments in the dissent from that decision. We concur, however, in the court's disposition of the states' fallback arguments in these cases.³⁹

39. Of course, the court's conclusion here that state law properly authorized the state officials to execute contracts in no way undercuts the arguments in dissent from Pace that the federal law during the relevant time period (1996 through 1998) did not communicate to the states that they possessed Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity to waive. See Pace, 403 F.3d at 301 (Jones, J., dissenting).

(4)

No. 05-671

In the
Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Petitioner,

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA, ET AL.
Respondents.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

PETITIONER'S REPLY

GREG ABBOTT
Attorney General of Texas

BARRY R. MCBEE
First Assistant Attorney
General

EDWARD D. BURBACH
Deputy Attorney General
for Litigation

R. TED CRUZ
Solicitor General
Counsel of Record

RANCE L. CRAFT
Assistant Solicitor General

AMY WARR
Assistant Solicitor General

P.O. Box 12548
Austin, Texas 78711
(512) 936-1700

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Table of Authorities	ii
Argument	2
I. The Circuits Are Split Regarding Whether the Language of Section 2000d-7(a) Can Give Rise to a State's Knowing Waiver of Sovereign Immunity.	2
II. The Court Has Not Upheld Congress's Authority to Impose Conditions on Any Type of Federal Funding Based Solely on a General Interest in Discouraging Discrimination.....	4
Conclusion	6

TABLE OF AUTHORITIESCases

Barbour v. Wash. Metro. Area Transit Auth. , 374 F.3d 1161 (CA DC 2004)	4-6
Bd. of Trs. of the Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett , 531 U.S. 356 (2001)	3
Garcia v. SUNY Health Scis. Ctr. , 280 F.3d 98 (CA 2 2001)	2, 3
Grove City Coll. v. Bell , 465 U.S. 555 (1984)	4, 6
Lau v. Nichols , 414 U.S. 563 (1974)	4, 5
Pace v. Bogalusa City Sch. Bd. , 403 F.3d 272 (CA 5 2005) (en banc)	2
Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman , 451 U.S. 1 (1981)	2, 3
Reickenbacker v. Foster , 274 F.3d 974 (CA 5 2001)	3
South Dakota v. Dole , 483 U.S. 203 (1987)	4-6
Tennessee v. Lane , 541 U.S. 509 (2004)	3

Statutes and Rules

42 U.S.C. §2000d	4
42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a)	2, 5, 6
45 C.F.R. §80.3(b)(1)	4

No. 05-671

In the
Supreme Court of the United States

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Petitioner,

v.

JULIE DUNLOP ESPINOZA, ET AL.
Respondents.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

PETITIONER'S REPLY

The court of appeals in this case affirmed its precedent that (1) a “janus-faced” statute that fails to indicate whether its expunction of States’ sovereign immunity is achieved directly by abrogation or indirectly by consent is nonetheless “unambiguous”; and (2) a state agency that accepts any federal funds must forfeit its immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits in aid of Congress’s general interest in prohibiting disability discrimination. The United States makes no effort to dispute these holdings’ significant implications, arguing only that they are correct. But the United States’ thin defense of the decision below does not dispel the fundamental problems with the court of appeals’s analysis. The Court should grant the petition to address the important issues presented in this case.

ARGUMENT

I. THE CIRCUITS ARE SPLIT REGARDING WHETHER THE LANGUAGE OF SECTION 2000d-7(a) CAN GIVE RISE TO A STATE'S KNOWING WAIVER OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY.

In its response to the petition, the United States does not dispute the importance of the first question presented: whether 42 U.S.C. §2000d-7(a) contains the prerequisites for a knowing, valid waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity when a State accepts federal funds. Rather, the United States merely asserts that the decision below was correct. See Br. Opp. 10-13.

The United States does dispute, however, the existence of a relevant circuit split. It argues that the disagreement between the Second Circuit in Garcia v. SUNY Health Sciences Center, 280 F.3d 98 (CA2 2001), and the decision below concerns a knowing-waiver issue distinct from the clear-statement question raised in the petition. See id., at 11 & n.1.

But these two questions cannot be so neatly parsed. Rather, they are interwoven: "There can, of course, be no knowing acceptance if a State is unaware of the conditions or is unable to ascertain what is expected of it." Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman, 451 U.S. 1, 17 (1981). In other words, a State cannot be aware of the conditions of acceptance if Congress's offer is ambiguous. Garcia concluded that a State, reading the language of Section 2000d-7(a) and the applicable case law, could have believed that the statute abrogated its immunity. 280 F.3d, at 114. That decision directly conflicts with the Fifth Circuit's conclusion in Pace v. Bogalusa City School Board, 403 F.3d 272 (CA5 2005) (en banc), that Section 2000d-7(a) unambiguously invited States to voluntarily waive their immunity. See Pet. App. 34-39.

Moreover, in an attempt to diminish the importance of the conflict, the United States incorrectly argues that the Garcia rationale is no longer viable. In Garcia, the Second Circuit held that a State did not knowingly waive its immunity under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act by accepting federal funds because, at that time, it could have reasonably believed that its immunity had already been abrogated. 280 F.3d, at 114. This Court's subsequent decision in Board of Trustees of the University of Alabama v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356 (2001), held that Title I of the Americans with Disabilities Act was an invalid abrogation of States' immunity under Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. After Garrett, then, many believed that Title II of the ADA—and, by analogy, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act—was also an invalid abrogation. See, e.g., Reickenbacker v. Foster, 274 F.3d 974 (CA5 2001) (reversing, in light of Garrett, prior circuit precedent holding Title II to be a valid abrogation). And if Title II was widely assumed to be an invalid abrogation, then the Garcia rationale could no longer survive. In other words, because States could no longer reasonably believe after Garrett that their immunity had been validly abrogated, they must have knowingly consented to Section 504's conditions when they accepted federal funds.

The Garcia window would have closed permanently had the prediction come true that Title II would not pass constitutional muster. But the prediction did not come true: the Court determined that Title II was a valid abrogation of state immunity in at least one of the statute's applications. See Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509 (2004). Lane portends the reinvigoration of the Garcia rationale, because States must inquire anew, for each application of Title II, whether their immunity has been validly abrogated. As Lane injects new uncertainty into the immunity calculus, the question whether States are able “to exercise their choice knowingly, cognizant of the consequences of their participation,” Pennhurst, 451 U.S., at 17, assumes renewed importance. The conflict between Garcia and the decisions of other circuits, therefore, has not been—but should be—resolved.

I THE COURT HAS NOT UPHELD CONGRESS'S AUTHORITY TO IMPOSE CONDITIONS ON ANY TYPE OF FEDERAL FUNDING BASED SOLELY ON A GENERAL INTEREST IN DISCOURAGING DISCRIMINATION.

As explained in the petition, South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203 (1987), requires that conditions attached to a federal grant be related to a federal interest in particular national projects or programs. Pet. 24. The United States asserts that Section 2000d-7(a) necessarily satisfies this requirement because it was patterned after spending conditions upheld by the Court in Lau v. Nichols, 414 U.S. 563 (1974), and Grove City College v. Bell, 465 U.S. 555 (1984). Br. Opp. 14-15. This logic fails, however, because Lau and Grove City are inapposite.

The condition applied in Lau plainly satisfied the relatedness test. Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 bans discrimination on the basis of, inter alia, national origin in any program receiving federal financial assistance. 42 U.S.C. §2000d. To enforce this prohibition, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) issued a regulation requiring school districts receiving federal aid to rectify any language deficiency that deprived national-origin-minority students of effective participation in the district's educational programs. 45 C.F.R. §80.3(b)(1). In Lau, a class of Chinese students sued their school district for violating this regulation. 414 U.S., at 564-65. “[T]he school district's failure to provide language instruction to foreign-born students bore an obvious relation to the federal educational appropriations the school district received.” Barbour v. Wash. Metro. Area Transit Auth., 374 F.3d 1161, 1174 (CADC 2004) (Sentelle, J., dissenting). For that reason, the Court concluded that, although Congress's power to condition federal grants has limits, “they have not been reached here.” Lau, 414 U.S., at 569.

By contrast, in this case there is no obvious relationship between federal funds received by the Department and the conditional waiver of the Department's immunity from Rehabilitation Act suits. Whereas insuring access to instruction is necessarily germane to providing education, prohibiting disability discrimination is not necessarily germane to the Department's variegated functions—e.g., highway patrol, emergency management, and criminal-law enforcement. More importantly, the court of appeals held that the Spending Clause does not even require such a nexus—it upheld Section 2000d-7(a) without examining the nature or purpose of the funds received. See Pet. App. 89. This holding effectively removes the important limits on Congress's spending power that the Court recognized in Lau. See 414 U.S., at 569.

And contrary to the United States' assertion, Lau does not stand for the proposition that Congress may impose spending conditions to vindicate its "interest in preventing the use of any of its funds to 'encourage[], entrench[], subsidize[], or result[] in' discrimination." Br. Opp. 15 (quoting Lau, 414 U.S., at 569). As Judge Sentelle has explained, this quotation from Lau is dicta:

- "[This quotation] was itself a quotation from a floor speech given by Senator Hubert Humphrey during the debates on the Civil Rights Act of 1964, is obvious dicta, and singularly unpersuasive dicta at that. A policy argument made in a floor statement by a Senator cannot be the basis of a legal doctrine meant to restrain the very exercise of policy-making power such an argument represents." Barbour, 374 F.3d, at 1173 (Sentelle, J., dissenting).

But even if Lau could be construed to hold that Congress's general interest in discouraging discrimination justified conditions attached to any federal funds, the Court necessarily retreated from that broad statement thirteen years later in Dole when it explained that spending conditions must be related "to the federal interest in particular national projects or programs." Dole, 483 U.S., at 207 (emphasis added) (internal citation and quotation omitted).

Grove City is even less relevant. That case involved a challenge to a spending condition under the First Amendment, not the Spending Clause. 465 U.S., at 575-76. Consequently, however similar Section 2000d-7(a) is to the condition at issue in Grove City, that decision has no bearing on whether either condition would satisfy Dole's relatedness requirement. See Barbour, 374 F.3d, at 1175 (Sentelle, J., dissenting) (explaining that Grove City "sheds little light on the [Spending Clause] issues here").

That the United States must reach back to inapposite, pre-Dole authority to justify Section 2000d-7(a)'s broad spending condition only underscores the need for the Court to resolve, at last, the question it reserved in Dole: What are "the outer bounds of the 'germaneness' or 'relatedness' limitation on the imposition of conditions under the spending power[?]" 483 U.S., at 208 n.3. Because the court of appeals held that Section 2000d-7(a) falls within these bounds regardless of the nature or purpose of the specific funds received by the Department, this case provides an excellent vehicle for the Court to address that question.

CONCLUSION

The Court should grant the petition for writ of certiorari.

Respectfully submitted,

GREG ABBOTT
Attorney General of Texas

BARRY R. MCBEE
First Assistant Attorney General

EDWARD D. BURBACH
Deputy Attorney General
for Litigation

R. TED CRUZ
Solicitor General
Counsel of Record

RANCE L. CRAFT
Assistant Solicitor General

AMY WARR
Assistant Solicitor General

Office of the Attorney General
P.O. Box 12548
Austin, Texas 78711
(512) 936-1700

March 10, 2006